ZIONISTS' FISTS FLY

Today

A Candidate for Cities.
A Western Victory.
A Hindu Built It.
Jim Reed Can't Quit.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

THE Manchester Guardian sees in Gov. Smith's nomination recognition of the power in great cities. It believes that national control is passing into the hands of "great city populations made up of more recent immigrant communities, which never yet have had a champion of their own in the presidential conflict."

SENATOR CAPPER, of Kansas, rejoiced in the Hoover-Curtis nomination as "proof that the Republican East has capitulated to the Republican West."

CAPPER thinks the country will be safe in the hands of "two farm-bred Western men, one a genius at constructive administration, the other a masterful political leader."

Most important to Republicans is the fact that Capper believes the Republican platform and candidates are entirely acceptable to farmers. Senator Capper understands farmers as well as any man in the country.

ASSAN DINA, good Hindu, is dead. May he live forever, in the heaven of his choice, or in that queerly negative Nirvana, if preferred. He rebuilt an astronomical observatory on Mont Blanc, dropping materials from airplanes, and had spent $5,000,000 on what will be the finest observatory in the world, on Mount Saleve.

WHEN completed this observatory, a gift to France, will cost $6,250,000 and have the world's greatest telescope, its diameter 105 inches, five inches wider than our Mount Wilson telescope.

In the clear mountain air, 4,437 feet high, this gigantic eye, looking into space, will be, scientifically, the finest monument on this earth.

SENATOR JIM REED, who says he leaves the Senate next March to practice law, should change his mind. Others can practice law as well as he. Few can put important truths with emphasis such as his.

HAVE you read what Reed said, denouncing the League of Nations, in 1919?

"I decline to set up any government greater than that established by the Fathers, greater than that baptized in the blood of patriots from the lanes of Lexington to the forests of the Argonne, greater than that sanctified by the tears of all the mothers whose heroic sons have gone down to death to sustain its glory and its independence. I decline to set up any government greater than the government of the United States of America."

THANKS largely to Reed's good fighting, the wishy-washies did not succeed in dragging this country into a European supergovernment. Such a man ought to be in public life, fighting, to his last day.

KING GEORGE, Queen Mary and 100,000 other Britons saw on Saturday an exhibition of new war planes.

Fighting pursuit planes, brand new, showed speed up to 200 miles, and swift day bombers showed how easily a city or a ship could be destroyed.

TWO HUNDRED airplanes were exhibited. Britannia means to rule the air waves also, and probably will.

We could rule them easily. But we are too busy talking sweet peace platitudes. We do not even establish a secretary for air, but make our air fleet a subordinate toy of the Army and Navy. We shall pay for it, some day, unless the Lord saves us from our fools.

FAMINE in Turkey, thousands of miserable peasants driven from the Konia plain. Selling half-starved cattle for as little as two dollars each, they crowd toward the cities. Drought, following a bitter winter, had reduced some of the peasants to eating grass.

KEMAL PASHA fears that the Konia plain region may never be repopulated, if the peasants leave, and strives to restrain them. Thus, at various times, vast regions formerly fertile, including wide regions in Mesopotamia and the Holy Land, have become abandoned deserts.

YOU may soon make up your mind, apart from any stunt business, to cross the ocean flying. A German concern will put a trans-Atlantic commercial dirigible in commission, first sending the ship around the world to inspire confidence.

HOW rapidly things move! When Queen Victoria determined to travel on the railroad her people, and her ministers, enlightened men, declared she had no right, in her exalted position, to take such risks.

Now her great-grandson, the Prince of Wales, flies around to his social engagements.

Air Victim To Hospital

PLANE CRASHED

Mrs. Earl C. Dean, 3467 Beechwood boulevard, injured when an airplane in which she and her husband were passengers gets crashed near Bettis Field, McKeesport, was removed to a hospital today. She has a broken ankle. Dean, slightly injured, is president of the American Society for the Promotion of Aeronautics and is a student aviator.

4 Here Drown In Day

The Monongahela River this morning yielded the first of yesterday's drowning victims of this district, believed by police to have been four.

The body of an unidentified woman, about 55, was recovered from the Monongahela near where she had leaped into the river yesterday from the railing of the South Tenth street bridge. It was removed to the morgue.

She weighed about 110 pounds, was five feet two inches in height, wore a black skirt, black lace shoes and two pairs of tan silk stockings. About her shoulders was a scarf of red, yellow and green.

Another woman was believed to have drowned herself.

River police also were dragging the Ohio and Allegheny river near the Manchester bridge, following the finding of a coat and purse in the middle of the bridge. Ownership of the articles has not yet been traced.

Anthony Lach, 44, of 23 South Twelfth street, watching police drag the river, was fatally hurt when pinned against the bridge rail by a truck. The vehicle had been left standing in the middle of the bridge. It moved when the brakes became loosened. Lach died today in South Side Hospital. John J. Hoban, 57 of 120 Washington place, driver.

AMUNDSEN REPORTED FOUND DEAD IN SEA

International News Service

LONDON, July 2.—An unconfirmed report reached Paris this afternoon that the body of Capt. Roald Amundsen, missing Norwegian explorer, has been found in the sea off the Norwegian coast, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Paris.

Efforts are being made to obtain official confirmation of the report.

Capt. Amundsen was one of the three men aboard a French sea plane which set out from Tromsoe, Norway, two weeks ago today to search for the missing members of the Nobile expedition. The others in the plane were Gene Guilbaud, the pilot, and Lieut. Leif Dietrichsen, another Norwegian explorer.

The plane was never definitely heard from, although fishermen reported seeing a plane 60 miles south of Bear Island on June 18, which may have been the Amundsen seaplane. Bear Island is about halfway between the Spitzbergen coast and Tromsoe.

RESCUERS NEAR FLOE

MOSCOW, July 2.—(AP.)—The Russian ice breaker Krassin, which has been fighting its way through ice floes for several weeks in an effort to reach the stranded men of the dirigible Italia near Foyne Island off Northeastland, today reported that it had reached a point 80 miles from that region.

Prof. Samollowich, noted Russian Arctic explorer, who is in command of the rescue expedition, notified the authorities in Moscow that he hoped to be able to locate the marooned men shortly and to take them aboard.

As soon as the Foyne Island group is rescued the Krassin will begin a search for the six men of the Italia who were carried away in the gas bag and for the missing Amundsen party. The Krassin is keeping in communication with the base ship Citta di Milano, which, in turn, is in wireless communication with the Nobile men.

The Russian flier Babushkin, who hopped off from the Soviet icebreaker Malgin, which also is en route to Spitzbergen, and has not been heard from since Friday, still was missing.

Hickman Clubs Cell Mate

International News Service.

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., July 2.—Sullen and taciturn, William Edward Hickman, kidnaper-slayer of Marion Parker, refused today to disclose the reason for his vicious battle here yesterday with his cellmate, Joseph Troche.

Aroused by the noise of the struggle and the yells of other men in condemned row, guards arrived at Hickman's cell to see him astride Troche, beating him over the head with the leg of a stool.

Guards tore Hickman from his victim with difficulty. The former Kansas City youth was in a frenzy of rage as he battled Troche, who was bleeding and almost unconscious when rescued. He was taken to the prison hospital for treatment, but would not say why he was attacked by Hickman.

Hickman bore but few marks of the struggle. Questioned by prison authorities, he would not tell them what caused him to suddenly turn on his cellmate.

Troche, a condemned murderer for El Dorado county, and Hickman have been cellmates for about two months.

BURWELL FOR BRAME

Bill Burwell, obtained by the Pittsburgh Pirates during their last Eastern trip from the Indianapolis club of the American Association, has been returned to the Hoosiers and Ervin Brame, right-hander, who figured in the deal along with Adam Comorosky, will rejoin the Corsairs, according to an announcement this morning by Barney Dreyfuss, president of the club.

Brame has been enjoying much success with the Hoosiers, having won five out of six games since joining them. His only defeat came by a 1-to-0 score.

Burwell, on the other hand, has not been going so well with the Corsairs and it was decided to return him to Indianapolis. The Bucs are in Indianapolis today to meet the Hoosiers in an exhibition game and when they leave tonight Brame will be a member of the party.

M'CASKEY WILL IS UPHELD

The will of John G. McCaskey, millionaire oil operator, sought only to protect the financial future of his children and it does not violate the rule against trusts in perpetuity, the State Supreme Court has decided in an opinion handed down in Philadelphia, a copy of which was received here today.

Five children who inherited approximately $2,000,000 sought to obtain their respective shares outright, instead of in trust, by attacking the will.

The Supreme Court upholds the Orphans Court of Allegheny county as to the decree of distribution, but reverses the lower court as to appointment of a substitute trustee. The Orphans Court had named an institution as trustee over protest of the sons, who had submitted a list of six men, all of whom were rejected by the court.

RODY MARSHALL DIES; FOLLOWS SON

Rody P. Marshall, 57, one of the foremost members of the Allegheny county bar and nationally known as a sportsman, died today of pneumonia at his home, 201 Lytton avenue. He had been ill four weeks. His death occurred at 12:30 a. m.

When Common Pleas Court adjourned today it did so in memory of Attorney Marshall and a motion was received in Criminal Court praying for the same show of respect for Thursday. In informing the Court of Common Pleas of Attorney Marshall's death, Attorney Harold M. Irons said:

"He stood almost always on the side of the injured and the helpless. The poor people will miss him."

Rody Patterson Marshall was born in the Perrysville avenue district of the old city of Allegheny on November 7, 1870. He was a son of Thomas M. and Mrs. Mary M. Marshall. His father, "Glorious Old Tom," was Nestor of the criminal lawyers of Pennsylvania and was widely known as an orator.

Educated at the Allegheny city public schools and the Pittsburgh Academy, Rody Marshall registered as a law student on July 2, 1889, and studied law at the University

SMITH HOLDS POLL LEAD

More than 8,000 persons voted for either Hoover or Smith in The Sun-Telegraph's straw vote which was taken last week on machines throughout the downtown and East Liberty districts.

Smith maintained a four-to-three lead over his opponent in most of the districts, polling 4,621 votes for the week against 3,773 for Hoover.

Adding the mail vote and the personally-canvassed vote, the total number of votes gathered by The Sun-Telegraph gives a grand total of 8,389 for Smith and 6,330 for Hoover.

Starting last Monday the voting machines were put into use and recorded more than 1,000 votes each day, running on Thursday well over 1,700 for the day.

Crowds gather about the machines each day expressing their preference for President as between Hoover and Smith and learning the operation of the vot-

CONCLAVE IN UPROAR; SPEAKER HISSED

Dissension in the ranks still marks the Zionist Organization of America's thirty-first annual convention, opened yesterday in the William Penn Hotel amid an uproar. Despite vigorous opposition, Louis Lipsky, of New York, president of the organization, was elected honorary chairman of the convention, sweeping aside opponents supporting Dr. Stephen Wise, celebrated New York rabbi.

The warlike attitude of the opponents of the Lipsky administration was resumed when the second day's session of the convention opened shortly after 2 p. m. today.

The regular business before the delegates was the report of the committee on committees and the statement of the judges on the affairs of the Zionist organization.

FILIBUSTER LOOMS

The tactics of the opposition, in which Rabbi Stephen S. Wise is one of the leading factors, indicated that a filibuster would be attempted to delay action on all motions. The object of this is to hold up the business of the convention until a large number of the delegates be-

Strongbox Cracked For $800

When employes of the M. Feigenbaum & Sons store at 8 Diamond Square reported for work today they found the safe cracked and empty.

The loot was $800 cash and some checks, the detective bureau was told. The robbers had jimmied a rear door and apparently used an electric torch.

POWER TRUST INVADES WISCONSIN SCHOOLS

International News Service

WASHINGTON, July 2.—A public utilities information bureau has been maintained in Wisconsin since 1920 at a cost of approximately $11,000 annually, Arthur M. Herwig, director of the organization, testified today before the Federal Trade Commission's inquiry into the so-called power trust.

Herwig said that the bureau was financed by the Wisconsin Utilities Association. The witness declared he had been connected formerly with four Wisconsin newspapers and still retained membership in the Wisconsin Press Association, the Utilities Corporation standing his expense.

Herwig testified that Wisconsin had been divided into districts by his bureau for the purpose of distributing utilities information. About 9,000 gas and electric pamphlets were sent into the Wisconsin schools by the bureau.

WORKS TEACHERS

Questioned as to how he arranged to get these pamphlets into the schools, Herwig declared that he first sent cards to the teachers, with the sample pamphlets and the suggestion that they be employed in instruction work.

"Our bureau does not originate speeches," Herwig said. "We sent out through the state, speeches that have been made elsewhere by utilities officials, however."

Herwig submitted a report he had prepared showing that the Wisconsin bureau co-operated with the economic department of Wisconsin University through Herwig's connection with Prof. Glazer, of the University.

Mrs. Thaw Wins Back $600,000

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Ruling that young Lawrence C. Thaw used undue influence on his 83-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, of Pittsburgh, mother of Harry K. Thaw, in obtaining a $600,000 gift from her in January of 1925, the United States Circuit Court here today ordered him to return the money.

Mrs. Thaw lost her plea for the return of the money in a lower court, but this decision is overruled by the Circuit Court's action. The court held that Lawrence took advantage of his grandmother's age and an illness from which she was suffering and that he was "ambitious and grasping."

Pneumonia Fatal to Marshall of Michigan, where he received his bachelor's degree in 1892.

PRACTICED 35 YEARS

He was admitted to the Allegheny county bar on motion of Judge Charles S. Fetterman on December 17, 1892, and formed a law partnership with his father, which was continued until the latter's death in 1898. He then organized the firm under the style of Rody P. and Meredith R. Marshall, the junior partner being his younger brother.

Before his twenty-fifth year Rody P. Marshall had made a name for himself in the Allegheny county courts and was identified with many important cases. In defenses made for his clients, especially in Criminal Court, he eclipsed even the fame of his father.

His aggressiveness as a prosecutor was no less marked. In 1903-4 he was attorney for scores of victims injured in the Sheraden naphtha explosion and his work in their behalf attracted wide attention. In the last 20 years he was almost constantly before the courts, both state and Federal, and it was not uncommon for him to spend several weeks consecutively in daily court trials.

His wide acquaintanceship made him a power before juries. His usual manner was quiet and gentle and his prematurely white hair and delicate stature distinguished him, and won him the good will of jurors and court attaches. However, he was a master of searching cross-examination and his verbal flaying of a witness or opposing counsel often was the chief incident in trials in which he appeared.

Reared on his father's country place on the Perrysville hills, he became fond of horses when a small lad and was a skilled rider and driver. As soon as he made a name for himself at the bar he turned to horses as a means of recreation, and when the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Matinee Club opened its Brunot's Island track in 1899, Rody P. Marshall was one of its most enthusiastic promoters.

He established his own rural residence on a large farm near Bakerstown and maintained it with all the pomp of a gentleman's estate, with notable stables and kennels. He joined also the Schenley Matinee Club and at his farm bred his own trotters.

One of his famous horses was Claudio, with a record of 2:12½. He appeared at Brunots Island and Schenley, and afterwards was raced professionally and made many winnings. Claudio was a chestnut sorrel with white face and legs, as flashy a trotter as ever was brought out on any track, old horsemen said, and he reigned through the season's from 1907 to 1913. When Claudio's racing days were over he was taken back to the farm at Bakerstown and there lived in equine luxury and repose until he died a few years ago.

His love of horseflesh caused Rody Marshall to take up thoroughbreds, and Jim Young, at Lexington, Ky., was his trainer. His runners are still making the circuits and their pedigrees and records on the tracks were cherished by their owner until the hour of his death.

Sportsmen were his boon companions. When a horseman got into a legal tangle it was declared that Rody Marshall voluntarily would go to his aid and no bills for counsel fees were ever submitted.

Marshall was an ardent sports fan. He occupied the same seat each night at the Motor Square Garden bouts, and generally was accompanied by his brother, Meredith. He also attended virtually all the big bouts in New York. Several times when local bouts did not come up to expectations, he expressed his disapproval in no uncertain terms, vowing that never again would he attend. But each succeeding show saw him back in the first row seat, which was reserved for the season.

Boxing was not his only sporting diversion. He liked baseball, football and all of the others, and when his son, Rody P. Marshall, Jr., became an invalid through having his neck broken while diving in Naragansett Bay, many sporting notables visited the Marshall home to cheer up the lad. Gene Tunney, the heavyweight champion, and Babe Ruth were among the leading lights of the sporting world who thus came in contact with the youth. Young Rody died March 18.

Girl Bride Kills Self

Going to his room to kiss his bride, Rose, 21, goodby before starting for work this morning, Dominick Giancole, 2611 South Eighteenth street, found her dead in bed, a bullet wound in her right temple and a revolver by her side.

The young wife had shot herself, it is believed, while her husband was preparing his breakfast. She had been melancholy, he told police, and a week ago said, "Let's die together," but he thought she was only joking. They were married Easter week. Giancole was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

The two youths drowned late yesterday while swimming were James Neuhart, 18, of 3415 Brighton road, and Cyril Gallagher, 20, of 54 Murray avenue, Pleasant Valley. Neuhart was a student at David B. Oliver High School, North Side.

The two youths are believed to have been seized with cramps. Thomas Young, 18, of 624 High street, Sharpsburg, made a vain attempt to rescue Neuhart, his cousin, but was exhausted, he said, by Neuhart's struggles, which threatened to drag Young himself under water.

Ellis Eschman, 27, of 332 Forty-fifth street, another cousin of Neuhart was hit by an automobile while running along the bank of the river. He was slightly bruised. John Caron, of 1705 Morningside avenue, was the driver of the machine, police say.

MAIL PILOT FOUND DEAD AFTER STORM

ELSINORE, Mo., July 2.—(AP.)—Still grasping the shattered "stick" of his airplane and with a packet of Democratic convention pictures at his side, Leslie Smith, air mail pilot of St. Louis was found dead with his wrecked plane on a wooded hillside near here yesterday.

The plane was shattered to bits, the fusilage and wings clinging to a tree, the motor and undercarriage having landed 50 feet beyond.

Smith was found by three farmers who had beaten their way through the underbrush as members of searching parties who had sought the flier since Thursday in the densely wooded Ozarks of Southeastern Missouri. A violent storm which wracked the vicinity Thursday night apparently caused the wreck of the plane and death of the pilot. A parachute strapped to Smith was untouched, giving rise to the belief that he had probably lost control of his ship at a low altitude. This theory was further borne out by a path through the tops of oak trees which had been clipped off by the plane as it swooped to the ground.

Fellow pilots from the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, and an army blimp from Scott field, Belleville, Ills., had searched vainly over the spot where the plane was found, but were unable to see the wreckage because of low visibility. Twenty planes were engaged in the search.

come wearied with the proceedings and leave for their homes when they see that the sessions are to be prolonged.

Officers and committee members were at work until long past midnight and were late in rising. Meantime the rank and file of the Zionists buzzed about the lobby of the hotel and discussed yesterday's outbreaks. Administration followers declared the action of the opposition "disgraceful" and resented the remarks of Rabbi Wise, who had described the convention as an example of "rowdyism."

Fists got into action during the tempestuous session when a delegate spoke out loudly about a "gang running the meeting." Another delegate landed a punch on the speaker's jaw, but pacifists separated the combatants and stopped hostilities.

The convention opened peaceably enough, with Adolph Edlis, chairman of the Pittsburgh Zionist reception committee, and James F. Malone, president of Pittsburgh Council, welcoming the thousand delegates. Dr. M. B. Lichtenstein, president of the Pittsburgh Zionist district, introduced President Lipsky for his annual address. Hisses and howls greeted President Lipsky's remarks. From this time until adjournment there were frequent interruptions.

Mr. Lipsky praised Great Britain for its aid in rebuilding Palestine as the Jewish national homeland and spoke of the reinforcements to Palestine reconstruction expected from the formation of the Jewish Agency whereby Zionists and non-Zionists will be united in the upbuilding of Palestine.

The convention will close tomorrow night. Five chairmen will preside at various sessions. They are: Judge William M. Lewis, of Philadelphia; Elihu D. Stone, Boston; Morris Rothenberg, New York; Max Shulman, Chicago, and Mrs. Archibald Silverman, Providence, R. I.

Order Greensburg Marathon Stopped

DANCE ON IN JAIL

2.—Greensburg's bunion derby will close at 6 o'clock tonight, on orders of Mayor H. N. Yont, inspired by the lack of attendance and ennui.

The public and the promoters and the police just about simultaneously decided that everybody had enough. If the dancers continue, they will have reached, by 6 o'clock, 361 hours of dancing.

The six couples in the Greensburg marathon were arrested for dancing on the porch of a private home at Blythedale Sunday, and escorted to the lockup at Buena Vista, insisted on shuffling along "behind the bars."

There's a dance hall on the seond floor of the jail house and the obliging keepers allowed the marathoners the use of the hall. The charges against the dancers were dropped when Promoter R. C. Overdorf agreed to face a charge of maintaining a nuisance—a new description of a marathon. Early

14 GO ON HERE

Their civic pride aroused by the production of a new marathon mark of 481 hours in Madison Square Garden New York, the seven remaining couples in Duqesne Garden's shuffle session carried on today with a determination to bring back to their native heath the perpetual motion championship of this universe.

"We are first in industries, we shall be first in marathons," the dancers might very well have promised as they reached 448 hours at 3 p. m. They were a determined lot.

The competitors spent Sunday on the Monongahela River in the Japanese Gardens boat, avoiding conflict with the blue laws and being entertained when Edward Townsend, one of the Garden owners and superintendent of city property, was splashed by much water.

In a small speed boat Townsend was approaching the marathon boat. The boats collided. Capt. Bill Young, on the Japanese Gardens, seized Townsend while Townsend's pilot swam clear of the wreckage and was rescued, so to speak, when a rope was tossed to him.

After spending Sunday in an apartment the endurance demons in the Homestead test returned to Stahl Gardens today and at 3 p. m. had reached 140 hours. The field was reduced to 18 couples at 11 a. m. when brother and sister, Craig and Grace Downey, retired.

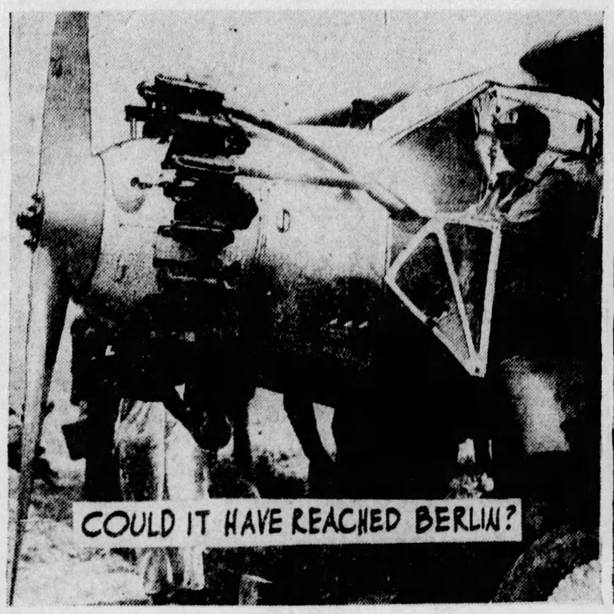
AS THEA ABANDONED OCEAN HOP

COURAGE STAYS

Thea Rasche has not lost courage in herself, but she is not going to fly the Atlantic Ocean from America to Berlin. She says so and insists. This is Thea mounting a plane.



SHIP

Thea was to have used a new Bellanca monoplane, provided by Stillman money. Amelia Earheart now stands alone as a woman sea flier, because Mabel Boll retired from the race.

MAP

A long time was spent over the flight maps. Thea planned to fly the plane herself—something, at least, that no other woman ocean flier has done—and had a man relief pilot and a mechanic.

5 INJURED IN CRASH

Five persons were injured late yesterday when a Ryan monoplane crashed two miles from Bettis Field in making a forced landing from a height of 400 feet. The plane, piloted by Jack Smith, had just taken off a few minutes before from Bettis Field.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Dean, of 3487 Beechwood boulevard, two of the passengers, were injured. Mrs. Dean suffered a broken right ankle and cuts and bruises. Her husband was cut and bruised. Dean, president of the American Society for the Promotion of Aeronautics and a student aviator, said he believed the gasoline supply failed, although men in charge of the field were unable to say what had caused the crash.

Smith fought heroically with the controls to make a safe landing and did skillful work in dodging wires and trees, according to witnesses. He also was injured, although not seriously.

FRED MORRIS DEARING

FRED MORRIS DEARING, United States minister to Portugal, was born in Columbia, Mo., November 10, 1879; educated at the University of Missouri. Appointed second secretary of the American legation at Pekin, China, in 1907, and since has served at various diplomatic posts, and for a time was appointed assistant Secretary of State. In 1922 he was appointed minister to Portugal.

One of the best friends of this legation in Lisbon is Mr. Rodrigo de Castro Perreira, who worked for four years in the steel mills of Pittsburgh.

. . . You have in Pittsburgh also a station called KDKA, which is certainly the station which has put your part of the world on the map as far as this country is concerned. From my own bedroom I have at times after midnight listened to KDKA on its regular wave, and anyone with a short wave set can always pick up this marvelous pioneer station.

I have had the pleasure of receiving in the legation over here . . . your illustrious fellow citizen, Col. Samuel Harden Church. . . . My colleague in Spain for nearly two years was Mr. Alex P. Moore, who not only made himself famous as a very successful and efficient ambassador, but challenges the world when it comes to attracting beautiful women. . . .

Pittsburgh not only has a world-wide reputation, but in my opinion its reputation is growing and will continue to do so.

(From letters collected by Roy Jassen of Pittsburgh.)

Tomorrow: Lewis Einstein, American minister to Czecho-Slovakia.

HANDS OFF IS POLICY

Political leaders are not going to interfere in the McManus-O'Malley "Strip" war which flared up last week, when Owen McManus, chairman of the Second Ward, became involved in a brawl with Police Inspector Joseph Elsner in Penn Avenue Police Station.

The difference is purely local and will have to be worked out by the parties invovled, political leaders said today. County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, county organization leader, said that he would not interfere in the trouble.

"The trouble between O'Malley and McManus is a local condition. The county organization has never meddled in such situations and will not in this case," Commissioner Armstrong said.

It is understood that Mayor Charles H. Kline recognizes Pat O'Malley as ward chairman. O'Malley was ousted from the leadership of the Strip ward this year by McManus.

Public Safety Director James M. Clark said that he was interested in the controversy to the extent of preserving order.

TREASURY SURPLUS 398 MILLIONS

WASHINGTON, July 2.—At the start of the fiscal year 1929 today, the Federal government has a Treasury surplus of $398,000,000, according to the annual report of Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury.

Declaring that the fiscal year 1928 brought a further improvement in the government's financial position, Mellon said in his report that the tax burden had been lightened by $220,000,000; that the national debt had been reduced $900,000,000, and that the large income tax returns proved the country's prosperity.

Mellon's report follows in part:

"The fiscal year just closed has witnessed a further improvement in the financial position of the government. There was a substantial surplus of receipts over expenditures. The national debt was reduced by over $900,000,000, accompanied by a material cut in interest charges. The vast refunding operations begun in 1927 were continued and have been well nigh brought to a successful conclusion. Taxes were again cut by over $220,000,000.

"The total ordinary receipts amounted to $4,042,000,000 as compared with $4,129,000,000 in the fiscal year 1927. The expenditures chargeable against such receipts were $3,644,000,000, as compared with the budget estimate of $3,621,000,000 (exclusive of $50,000,000 under war claims act), and expenditures in 1927 of $3,494,000,000. The surplus amounted to $398,000,000, as compared with a surplus of $635,000,000 in 1927.

"The aggregate of tax receipts, that is, customs, income tax and miscellaneous internal revenue receipts is $3,364,000,000, or $111,000,000 less than receipts from these sources in 1927.

"Income tax receipts aggregate $2,174,000,000, as compared with $2,225,000,000 in 1927."

PASTORS DEBATE BAN ON 'CAPTIVE'

Whether the Pittsburgh Council of Churches will file with the police a formal protest against the scheduled production of "The Captive" at the Gayety Theater next week is being decided this afternoon at a meeting. The play has been barred from presentation in New York, Detroit and Los Angeles.

Representatives of "The Captive" company asked the ministers to suspend judgment until they have seen the first performance. But the ministers preferred to judge the play by reading the manuscript. Dr. Charles R. Zahniser, executive secretary of the council, read the play and prepared some recommendations.

Representatives of the Gayety Theater and "The Captive" company were offered an opportunity to present their case to the ministers.

Dr. Ralph E. Urmy is chairman of the social service committee.

E. W. Smith, recently appointed vice president in charge of the Central region of the Pennsylvania Railroad with headquarters in Pittsburgh, assumed his new duties today. Mr. Smith, who formerly was general superintendent of the West Penn division with offices here, has been located in Philadelphia for the past two years as general manager of the Eastern region.

Improvement of local freight facilities, including the construction of a huge produce platform, will be speeded, Mr. Smith said in commenting on the Pennsylvania's Pittsburgh program. He also stated that reports, especially those for this district, indicated a general improvement of business conditions.

FAMILY BOMBED SECOND TIME

For the second time within four months the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ignac Krek, at Presto, has been damaged by a bomb. Early yesterday, the couple and their six children were hurled from their beds by the bomb which had been placed under the front porch.

Four months ago a bomb virtually demolished a garage and filling station operated by the family. Yesterday's damage was about $1,500. Detectives can assign no reason for the bombings.

CONFESSES TO STORE THEFT

William E. Barker, 28, of 3284 Dawson street, confessed in Morals Court today that he had strolled into the Perry Lingerie Shop, 422 Penh avenue, confiscated $300 worth of lingerie—and strolled out. He also admitted pilfering at least a dozen women's purses in office buildings.

Magistrate A. D. Brandon held Barker for court, and held for further investigation two girls—Mildred Wensel, 22, and Marion Brown, 18—arrested at Barker's address.

GIRL KILLED IN AUTO

ONE OF 5 HURT AS CAR RAMS INTO POLE

Running onto the sidewalk to avoid hitting a street car in Millvale avenue near Baum boulevard early today, a large automobile hit a pole, was virtually demolished, and the five passengers were injured, one of them fatally. Lena Leibling, 18, of 849 Herron avenue, died at Homeopathic Hospital. Samuel Barbarine, 18, of 164 Meadow street, driver, is held by police.

Harry Levine, 13; Betty Levine, 14, and Jacob Levine, 22, brothers and sister, all of 5412 Bossart street, and Barbarine, escaped with only cuts and bruises.

Mrs. G. W. Hurtt, of 540 Trenton avenue, and Mrs. F. C. Featon, of 546 Trenton avenue, both of Wilkinsburg, were injured slightly late yesterday when their automobile was struck by a truck driven by C. M. Johnston, 7036 Monticello street, in Laketon road. Police who arrested Johnston say they found liquor in his machine and that he had been drinking.

When his machine overturned in the Freeport road near Tarentum yesterday, Frank Stewart, 50, of Vellsburg, W. Va., was injured seriously. He is in Allegheny Valley Hospital. Other passengers in the machine escaped injury.

POLICE STOP N. Y. DANCE DERBY

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP.)—The "dance marathon" which had been in progress at Madison Square Garden for 20 days was stopped by police at midnight Saturday night at the completion of the 481st hour.

Nine couples were on the floor when police acted under an order issued by Supreme Court Justice Valente calling for cessation of the contest at midnight. As the dance stopped, friends hoisted the dancers to their shoulders and carried them around the hall.

The 18 dancers were the survivors of 91 couples who entered the contest June 10 for a prize of $5,000. Milton E. Crandall, the promoter, said that the prize money would be divided among the nine teams.

ORDERLY FINISH

Despite the presence of 100 policemen, prepared for a possible riot, the finish of the long-distance dance occurred quietly. One couldn't even hear a snore.

The prize-winning survivors were Gunner Neilson and Hannah Karpman, of New York; Charlotte Kush and Dominick Laperte, of Johnstown; Anna King and Tommy Nolan, of Pittsburgh; Eddie Leonard and Marianne Jacque, of Pittsburgh; Bill Bush and Mary Promitis, of Pittsburgh; Jimmy Priore and Flo Carlough, of Passaic, N. J.; Alfred Ippaliti and Dorothy Bremen, of New York; James Scott and Olga Christenson, of New York, and Dave Auerbach and Vera Campbell, of New York.

STRIKERS SING— IN NEXT COUNTY

ROSSITER, Pa., July 2.—Rossiter's striking miners met again yesterday and held an open air song service without the expected interference of state police and deputy sheriffs. The gathering was in defiance to the police and deputies who last Sunday broke up a similar gathering.

The meeting was held in a field on the outskirts of the town, just across the county line in Jefferson county. The strikers are barred from using the Magyar Presbyterian Church lot, their regular meeting place, by the injunction of Judge J. N. Langham of Indiana county. The Rev. A. J. Phillips, pastor of the church and also a officer of the local miners' union, conducted the services.

Eva Von Berne May Get Lead Opposite John Gilbert; Cast Also to Include Ralph Forbes

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 2, 1928.

IT looks as though Eva Von Berne will get the break of breaks at the very outset of her Hollywood-conquering march. Eva has just arrived from beyond the seas. And here she is taking tests to prove her screen suitability for the leading feminine role opposite John Gilbert in "Mask of the Devil." So if no black cats cross Eva's path, and she is careful about walking under ladders, "Lady Luck" may stay with her.

It was a little surprising to learn that Ralph Forbes will play in the "Mask." He was expected to essay the lead opposite Garbo. But it seems they want a taller man, and so Ralph is temporarily assigned to secondary roles.

When Norma Shearer begins to be "The Little Angel," Nils Asther will be her assistant cherub. Nils seems to find great favor among the slender ranks of leading men, although I must cattily confess, I could never see why. However, when Irving Thalberg's bride selects him for her picture, I am coming to believe that his acting must possess merit which I have stupidly failed to discover.

The Buck Jones outfit held its [illegible]plane party according to sched[illegible]e, and sure enough, Dick Grace, [illegible]ose daredevil courage didn't even [illegible]lk at a brief engagement to Alice [illegible]hite, had the misfortune to crack[illegible] his plane. Fortunately, not a great deal of damage was done. But two "ladies of the press" who were his passengers, have determined to remain on the ground for a while. No, I wasn't one of them. From an auto you can walk home, and you can swim from a yacht—but, boy, when you're in an airplane you're there to stay. And I haven't a parachute.

Look carefully if you stroll Broadway, or perhaps Park avenue, and you may get a glimpse of Director George Fitzmaurice and Diana Kane, who is the Mrs. They are in town to look over what shows survive the humidity before Fitz returns to direct Billie Dove in "La Tosca." Diana seems to have quit the screen cold, although she and her sister, Lois Wilson, are among its most famous sisters. The Fitzmaurices, by the way, have one of the most "gorgeous" homes among all the palatial residences of Hollywood.

It's nice for a star to have a lot of fans. But once in a while it's a pest, too. At Louise Fazenda's beach party for Betty Colfax, Gotham visitor, the comedienne told of recent persecutions by a too ardent fan admirer who telephoned at all hours with various propositions intended to be flattering. Finally, Louise's almost-new hubby, Hal Wallis, got on the wire and advised the Lothario in rather emphatic terms to "lay off." The youth inquired Hal's identity, and hearing he was Louise's better half, just whistled softly and hung up.

Fanny Brice has begun work on "My Man," which will be a "squeakie." Those who are helping make it a "wow" are "Big Boy" Williams, Edna Murphy, Andre De Segurola, Richard Tucker and Arthur Hoyt. This is Fanny's first film, you know.

Which reminds me that there are mashers in Hollywood as there are everywhere. Not long ago a couple of them did their darnedest to attract attention from Estelle Taylor. Suddenly one of them happened to look around, and saw her husband a few feet away. No need to tell you speed records were broken in the get-away. Unless, of course, you've forgotten that off-screen Estelle is Mrs. Jack Dempsey.

Oh, how could I forget! Guess who's coming out to Hollywood soon. No less than "Our Jimmy." Yep, Mayor Walker, and Jimmy's pal, Mr. Seaman, is coming on ahead to pave the way. New York's popular song writer has written to a few of the crowd here threatening dire consequences if any of them dares to make a single date for him prior to his arrival. You can bet Jimmy will get the key to Hollywood, which may make up for some of those which he has handed out to visiting Elks and Campfire girls.

CHEMISTRY HELPS

Lena Malena was artificially tanned for the part of an octoroon, the process consisting of a chemical spray and rays of a special light.

HOUSES OFFER NEW BILLS

There are three juvenile roles in "Cradle Snatchers" to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt beginning tonight.

Beginning tonight the Nixon Players will present "The Nervous Wreck," a farce of adventure in the Far West, by Owen Davis. Henry Williams, "the nervous wreck," played by Harry Bannister, is introduced in the first act as having so many different ills that he has to carry a private medicine case.

The Davis this week features "Wagner Brothers Side Show," with its barker, giant, fat lady, wild man, Albino and other freaks, all actors and actresses contributing their part to the story.

Anne Forrest and George Baxter will play the juvenile leads in the George Sharp Players' presentation of "The Music Master" in the Pitt next week. Gus Forbes will act the role of beloved old German professor.

Next week the Nixon Players will present "East Is West," comedy drama by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer. Much of the action concerns life in the Chinese quarter of San Francisco.

Marcia Byron, who plays the leading feminine role in "The Captive," which opens an engagement at the Gayety Monday night, July 9, has played leads with prominent actors, including the late H. Ibrook Blinn. The Gayety is to be devoted to dramatic productions henceforth, it is announced.

Director Raises Lemons as Side-Line

There is at least one man in Hollywood who can sympathize with the farm bloc, for he knows their troubles and woes from bitter experience. Most men know D. W. Griffith as a pioneer director-producer, but how many realize that he has one of the largest ranch properties in the fertile San Fernando valley?

Griffith grows lemons on the ranch—hundreds of acres of them—but this did not satisfy him. He wanted to grow cherries, not because he liked them, but rather because someone told him that cherry culture was impossible in the hot San Fernando valley.

"Thanks for the tip," said Griffith, and the first cherry trees were planted eight years ago as a gesture of defiance. When the trees reached maturity they bore great promise of fruit to come in the form of splendid blooms. But the blooms faded and died, leaving behind disappointing little stub ends—nothing more.

Eight years of failure found Griffith still hoping. Two weeks ago the director was putting the finishing touches to "The Battle of the Sexes" when a telephone message advised him that one of his trees had at last produced a cherry.

MRS. BARRYMORE

Mrs. Lionel Barrymore has a major worry right now. The New York Trust Company is suing her for $4,000,000, seeking to recover on a mortgage it claims to have granted her and her former husband, Felix Isman, on an office building a number of years ago.

NEGRO DENTIST, 83, EX-SLAVE, DIES HERE

Dr. Robert Brady, 83, pioneer Negro dentist of Pittsburgh, died Friday at his home, 2443 Bedford avenue. He was born a slave on the Virginia plantation of Sakey Steubenfield. He served his master as valet and traveled extensively with him. At the outbreak of the Civil War, Steubenfield joined the Confederate cavalry and took Brady with him, but in 1862 the master died and the slave joined the Union Army. He became the servant of Lieut. Koontz, of the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry, served with him in the Battle of the Wilderness and at Antietam, and later came to Pittsburgh with him.

Leaving Lieut. Koontz, Brady entered the service of Dr. G. W. Spencer, a dentist with office and laboratory at 254 Penn avenue, and learned the dental profession from him. In 1884 Brady set up in business for himself at his residence, 641 Wylie avenue.

Dr. Brady was a member of Bethel A. M. E. Church and of many fraternal organizations. He leaves his widow, a daughter, a sister and a brother.

THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP AFTER ALL

PADLOCKS FOR 40 PLACES

U. S. JUDGE DRIES UP WET SPOTS

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in Federal Court today signed decrees padlocking for one year 40 hotels, saloons, confectioneries and other places as "common nuisances" because of liquor law violations.

The decrees are the outcome of hearings in 75 cases June 18. Some provide that owners of the property may ask permission to use their buildings for other purposes by filing bond against further violations of the prohibition law, but the decrees stand as to proprietors.

Writs will be prepared at once for execution by deputy United States marshals, who will place the padlocks.

Decrees were brought into Federal Court last week by Assistant United States Attorney Ralph Richardson, but Judge R. M. Gibson declined to sign them, stating that he would await return of Judge Schoonmaker.

4TH ACCIDENTS INJURE TWO

Two boys of the Homestead district were injured yesterday in premature celebrations of the Fourth of July. George Halleck, 14, of 666 West Eighth avenue, West Homestead, was burned on the right hand by the discharge of a blank cartridge pistol. Felix Scorora, 6, of 441 West Locust way, Homestead, was burned on the left hand in a similar accident. Both boys were examining guns and accidentally discharged them. The boys received treatment from Dr. W. H. Langham of West street.

17 RIVER POOLS OPENED

Seventeen city river beaches located along the Ohio, Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, were ordered opened today by Public Safety Director James M. Clark. Nine life guards were sworn into service and assigned to beaches this morning. The remaining guards will be sworn in and assigned in a day or two.

SPECIAL GIFTS BOOST HOSPITAL FUND $91,850

The Allegheny General Hospital building fund was increased $91,850 last week, it was reported at a workers' luncheon in the Union Club today. This brings the total, for three weeks up to $429,600. MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

HELEN ROWLAND

WE WOMEN

THE PERFECT WIFE.

DARLING, would you have me prove
That I honestly adore you?
Then, oh let me tell you, Love,
All the things that I'd do FOR you!

I can't learn to cook or mend
Or to scrub a kitchen shelf—
But, I'd listen, hours on end,
While you talked about YOURSELF!

I'd not feed you home-made pies.
Fear not, Love, for your digestion.
But your weakest alibis
I would swallow without question!

As a housewife, I'm no riot,
My face would never draw a mob,
But I know when to KEEP QUIET!
Tell me—do I get the job?

A married woman starts buying her own flowers with the bride's bouquet.

A woman can listen so much faster than a man can talk, that by the time he has reached the end of his argument, she has beaten him to it and is starting all over again.

As a test for the imagination, try to picture a modern man calling on a modern girl just in order to hear her talk.

A woman goes into a beauty parlor to prepare herself for the evening to come—but when a man goes into one, it is usually to erase the traces of the evening before.

The only difficulty about divorcing your husband for desertion, these days, is getting him to "desert" you without making a Fuss.

HIS VISION OF HER -:- -:- By Fanny Darrell

TO the onlooker who watches them, they're just plain ordinary human beings. A youth and a maid, blissfully unconscious of all eyes. oT the youth there's a girl—THE girl—of all girls in the world. Pretty, of course, but not a raving beauty. But in his eyes, she's the embodiment of all the Madonnas that were ever painted or existed. When he looks at her he sees a vision of heavenly loveliness, a Madonna of Madonnas, serenely, majestically lovely, as she croons over the babe in her arms.

And who can deny that he isn't right? For every girl in the world is a Madonna as she holds her baby closely to her, and to a man in love this vision of her is the loveliest of all. To us she may be downright homely, but to him she's the loveliest thing that ever was, ever could be, or ever will be in the whole wide world. That's what Love does!

Albumen Indicates Something Is Wrong

A GREAT many letters come to me from various parts of the continent. Many of them ask for health advice, and others inquire about the treatment of this and that disease.

When you are really ill you need the personal attention of your family physician. I would not undertake to direct the treatment at long range. But advice about how to avoid disease I gladly give, as well as elementary information about the causes of disease.

Recently I had a letter from a disturbed mother, anxious to know what can be done for her son, who has "albuminuria." This lady does not realize she has asked a question I cannot answer without more information than she gave me. I shall attempt to explain why.

The word "albuminuria" is a term applied to albumen in the urine. There should be no albumen in the urine, and when it is present there is something really wrong with the health.

What is albumen? A good example is the white of an egg. Another form of albumen is present in the blood. If you strain out of the blood the red and white corpuscles, there is left a clear serum. This, in a sense, is not unlike egg white. At least, it contains albumen.

In some abnormal kidney conditions blood may escape from the vessels and find its way to the urine. In every such case albumen will be found if the urine is tested. There are a lot of such disturbances of the kidneys.

You would expect albuminuria in inflammation of the kidneys—the condition the doctors call "nephritis." Every inflammation has as a symptom congestion—a surplus of blood. It is not to be wondered at that in nephritis the fluid part of the blood oozes out and reaches the urine.

It is not necessary to have an actual inflammation. Anything which produces kidney congestion will do the same thing. Diseases of the lungs, liver or heart sometimes produce congestion of the kidneys, and it may be so pronounced as to result in albuminuria. Any fever is capable of doing the same thing.

There are conditions in which the blood is thinned, leaving it more likely to leak into the urine. Of course this is a pretty crude way to explain the condition, but, at least, it will make it understandable.

Among the disturbances which produce albuminuria are anemia and poisoning by drugs. Albuminuria is a symptom observed in epilepsy, concussian of the brain or nervous system. In women it is not uncommon during pregnancy.

Young persons may have albuminuria even in the absence of any exciting disease. After severe exertion or after a cold bath it may be present.

In short, it is impossible to form an opinion in any case of albuminuria without knowing all the circumstances. It may be a thing to worry over, or it may not be. To know what to do to overcome it you must first find out why the symptom appears.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Katherine Promises to Accompany Madge to the Station

HOT anger flamed in my heart against both my cousin, Jack Bickett, and the famous alienist, Hal Meredith, as I saw the tragic look upon Katherine's face the while her fingers clutched the letter from Dr. Meredith. Neither of them was worth the mental torture she was enduring, I told myself angrily. I remembered that Hal Meredith in his youth had sacrificed his love for her to his ambition and to a mistaken sense of duty toward his benefactor, the father of the girl whom he married. I also remembered the heart-breaking disillusionment which had been Katherine's after her marriage to my cousin, Jack Bickett, whom the war—I knew no other cause—had changed into a stern rigid misanthrope.

But even through my anger there sounded a tiny bell of warning. Katherine must not know that I had seen her suffering. A freely given confidence from her I should be glad to receive. But I did not want one forced by my accidental discovery. Noiselessly I crept back to the corridor, and then called to her, but softly, so as not to disturb Lillian who had told me she was going to take a nap.

"Oh—ho, Katrina! Where are you?"

There was a quick rustling upon the little balcony, and then Katherine with calm face and eyes came into the hall. As I saw her absolutely emotionless look, I envied her the professional training which enables her to turn herself into a perfectly balanced machine at a second's notice.

"Right here, old dear," she said lightly. "What can I do for you?"

"Have you anything planned for the time when I take Junior and Mother Graham to meet Dicky?" I asked.

"Then, would you mind driving down with me to meet Dicky. Of course Mother Graham and Junior will go, possibly Marion, but I want you with me."

She looked at me quizzically and I marveled at the transition from tragedy to mirth which her face had reflected within the minute.

"Shall I bring my first-aid kit?" she asked. "Do you expect to stage a swoon?"

"Not if you're along," I said laughing, "but I'm afraid I surely should need surgical attention if I took the trip without you."

"Is this what Marion calls 'deep dirt' or is it something which can be told to a curious lady?"

"Of course I'm going to tell you why I want you," I returned feeling that the controversy with Dicky was not of enough importance to justify my being secretive about it especially when I was asking her aid. "Come out on the balcony where we won't be interrupted."

She turned with me and we drew chairs close to the balcony rail. I could not resist a covert glance at the floor where the envelope of Hal Meredith's letter had lain. But there was no trace of it. She must have retrieved and hidden it at my call, a proof in itself of the exaggerated Puritanical sense of guilt which I suspected she felt at receiving and reading the letter from the man who had sworn to make her his own. I would have staked much on the fact that she never had answered one of the letters.

"It's very simple," I said hastily, afraid that she might have caught that furtive glance. "Dicky found out today that I am tutoring Miss Lincoln. For some reason or other he objects most violently, and when he comes down tonight I expect quite a—well let us call it a discussion—over the matter. I don't want to talk to him about the matter until after dinner, and he will not broach the subject while you are with me—so—you see!"

"I most surely do," she returned, laughing, "and I fully approve your policy of 'first feeding the brute.' Depend upon me. I shall be your shadow from the time Dicky arrives until you give me the word to vanish."

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Sunshine

DEAR MISS GALE:

I read your advice to others every night, and think you give such wonderful advice. Now here is my problem: Miss Gale, I have been going with a fellow by the name of Tom, who likes me a lot, but I don't care much for him. I mean I don't care for him as I do together about three times a week. I am 18 years old and everybody says he is such a nice and good fellow, which I know he is, but he is not the right one for me. One night I told him that I was going to leave the place where I'm working at for another. He said, "I will follow you anywhere you go, I'll go anywhere." But here lately, Miss Gale, I met a fellow I really truly love with all my heart, but I don't think he cares for me. I'm sure that he went with some girl place for a few months. I work upstairs and he works downstairs. I agree with you on the kissing question, for I never kissed this other fellow that I was going with. But this one, Miss Gale, oh, he's different. But here is the trouble: His mother doesn't care much for me and says lots of things about me that are not true. She is even trying to stop me from going with this other fellow, telling his people this and that. Oh, what shall I do? When I have a few minutes' time I go downstairs and we walk together, but he never makes a date with me. Only gives a hint, saying that he don't think that anybody would have him. So I just smile and I could not do it for I haven't the nerve to say anything to him. Miss Gale, I think I'll just leave, for I think there is no use. I dropped Tom, for I thought this other fellow would go with me, but he doesn't. I've been away from there for nearly six months and I have never seen or heard from him. Don't you think it looked rude for me to call some time? But when I left I never said a word to him, because I thought there was no use, but I'll never forget him, and if I should see him anywhere, what would I say to him? Thanking you for your wonderful advice, I am,

SUNSHINE.

If this boy really liked you, he wouldn't permit gossip to come between you. Try to forget him, and when you see him just be friendly and impersonal.

Worried and Dejected

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have never written before but I read your column often. My problem is this: Recently I met a very nice fellow. He came to see me and when he left he asked me to kiss him good night, but I didn't. He is almost through college, Miss Gale, and I think that he just asked me to kiss him to see if I would. What is your opinion? Now, Miss Gale, I usually do kiss a boy good night, but I am getting tired of it for I feel that if she really wants a boy to like her that a girl shouldn't do those things. He is coming to see me again, Miss Gale, and if he should ask me to kiss him would it be all right? You see I like him quite a bit, more than any other boy I know. Or do one thing I should wait until we are better acquainted? Will he like me better if I don't kiss him or do you think that he will think I am too "slow for him"? Hoping to see this in print very soon I am waiting.

WORRIED AND DEJECTED.

Don't let him kiss you, my dear. He will like and respect you much more if you don't.

Waiting

DEAR MISS GALE:

Have read your advice to young folks in the Sun-Tele and beg to congratulate you on your good work. Here is my problem. Have been married for three months and am very happy with my husband for he loves me as well as I love him. The only drop in my cup of bliss is a girl of rather questionable character who comes to our house and is constantly pawing (as I must call it) over my husband. Maybe I am a bit jealous, but it seems he doesn't like it and does not want me to associate with her. I treat her coolly, but it doesn't seem to take effect. My husband wants me to tell her to keep away, but that would be rather crude. He has threatened to tell her several times, but I have stopped him. He has told her several times to leave him alone, but to no avail. Now, please Miss Gale, what shall I do? She is also "crazy about" a certain fellow she knows nothing about and my husband and I to help her makes dates for her as her parents do not want her to. When we refuse she gets angry, which I think is very unreasonable. I certainly agree with you on the three much talked of subjects in your column. Some girls seem to think they cannot get a man interested in them if they do not smoke, drink or pet. I did not get mine that way, I am proud to say, and am by far happier. I think I read in your column a girl 15 years old being married to a man that would not let her out with her old sweetheart, it surely gave me at laugh. Thanking you for your space and time in advance, I am, WAITING.

I agree with your husband that something drastic must be done, my dear. It is difficult to tell her not to come to your home, but if you managed to be "out" every time she came, it might help. Be very distant and cold toward her and unless she is not human she will stop bothering you. You are quite right in staying out of her love affairs.

Bashful

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have written to you once before, but did not see any answer in Lovelorn. I hope to do better this time, as I am anxiously waiting for a reply. Last year about this time I met a boy with whom I fell very much in love. We went together for about a month, then he moved away. We are both 17 years old. I've seen him a couple of times when he came down to his grandmother's for a visit, but we only spoke to each other. July was the last time that I've seen him. This Easter I got a card from him. I wrote a letter back to him instead of sending a "friendship" card. Would it be proper to send him one now? I love him very much yet, and think that he likes me, too. We are both bashful, and as long as we went together we never had our arms around each other. Miss Gale, please tell me what to do. I have had a lot of boys ask me to be their steady girl, but I am still waiting for this one boy. Everybody that I go or have gone with calls me a bashful girl, but I think the bold girls can always have boy friends and even take them away from the bashful girls? A boy who died the last part of March was taken away from me just a week before his death by one of my friends. I thought very much of him and it almost broke my heart to give him up, which made me feel very badly after I heard of his death. I haven't gotten over it yet. He has a younger brother that I like real well. My friends tell me that every time he sees them he always asks them if I am. He has been up to my place once since his brother's death. Hoping to see an answer to my letter, and thanking you very much for your advice to me,

BASHFUL.

If the boy didn't answer your letter, my dear, there is nothing more for you to do. Wait until you hear from him again. Bold girls have a passing attraction for a great many men, but their feeling for girls like you is more real and lasting.

The Lovelorn Fan

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have much to say, if you will permit me, also to ask. Please tell me some things to talk about when a young man calls upon a girl. Sometimes, when the masculine friend is not talkative, the silence is quite embarrassing. Miss Gale, do you think natural and proper to kiss before becoming engaged if it means something. The kiss denotes affection. It is a symbol of love and good, real love and evil. Women kiss each other when meeting. Why then do you say no nice girl would kiss before she is engaged? By that, I don't mean necking or anything like that. I loathe necking because it very rarely leads to love and is very vulgar. Miss Gale, smoking doesn't hurt a boy or girl spiritually, and doctors differ on the effect of inhaling in that, physically. For those reasons I think it is entirely up to each person to settle that question for themselves. Of course I wouldn't drink, because it ruins a person's health, and each person should protect his body in this day and age. As you know, every citizen of the United States has religious freedom, and should have. Everyone should respect his neighbor's religion. Now, Miss Gale, don't you think such things as whether a person indulges in smoking, necking, etc., should be connected with his religion and should be respected and not talked about by others as long as no laws are broken? I am of that opinion. I have been told boys say they would not marry a lady with a little rouge or lipstick on, yet they say the ones who do not use any cosmetics are too ugly for them. Boys, don't be that way. A little make up helps every one look better, but girls, don't paint yourselves with about half a stick of lipstick on if you wish to look well groomed. Refined ladies do not do that. Miss Gale, I know I'm too young to be in love, but I like two boys particularly well. How can I get the one to want to know me better? He is not interested or he would show it, but how can I make him interested enough to say more than the courteous greetings exchanged as we pass. The other boy works in a store to which I go very seldom as it is out of the way. I would like to know him, but there is no way we could become introduced as there has never been anyone in the store (that I know of) knowing both of us, so that this boy and I may be introduced. Do you really think people of an altogether different nationality or religion should marry? Could they not fall in love with one of their own type, or does real love only come once? My friend and I have been arguing a question which I hope you can settle. Should peas be eaten with a fork or spoon? Should beans?

THE LOELORN FAN.

Talk about school affairs or friends you have in common, and the conversation will take care of itself, my dear. I am sorry you disagree with me concerning kissing and smoking. I cannot agree that the kiss is always a symbol of love. It should be, but it frequently is a symbol of a passing fancy. That is why promiscuous love-making is so cheap and vulgar. Be a little more friendly toward this boy when you meet, and it may awaken a desire to know you better. As for the other boy, it might be as well to meet him on a purely commercial basis when you are in the store.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, July 3

THE planetary operations for this day hint of many conflicting circumstances and conditions. While there may be much liveliness and attention to affairs in hand there will also be incentive to speculative and hazardous activities, both business and as related to pleasure. Be cautious as to putting the employment in jeopardy or offending those in authority.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a lively year and one to be turned to excellent account if the incentive to too hazardous transactions be wisely dealt with, and also if those in employment are careful not to risk their positions. Patience will bring due rewards.

A child born on this day may be clever, enterprising and versatile and may succeed better on its own account than in the employment of others. Powerful friends are assured.

Strive not to banish pain and doubt in pleasure's noisy din.

AFTER all, the world judges us by what we seem! A heart of gold encased in an irritable manner, like the burr on a chestnut, is unfortunate!

Careless manners and careless conversation have condemned many that did not deserve it!

Don't say and do things you really do not think or care for!

It is true that many unworthy people assume such worthy deportment, in public at least; the world is quite astonished when it finds out they are not all they seem.

Then how much more important it is for the worthy person to steal a little of their thunder, by appearing to be what he really is!

The impression one makes is really half the battle won!

Do you think for one minute crooks and impostors would have been accepted by those who had trusted them if they had not "seemed" to be all that they were pretending to be?

Yet it is unfortunately true, that many worthwhile people will not trouble to cultivate a little tact and good manners and appear to be what they in reality are!

Mrs. Haiden Offers to Take Emily Into the Business With Her

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and Kitten are daugters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her and tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Her father dies and Rossiter offers help, which her mother declines. Kitten, Emily's sister, is going with a wild crowd and is running close to danger. Ted tries to show Kitten that wild parties don't pay. Every morning Emily finds roses on the doorknob from Kingdom Coles. Marty goes in Judge Morrow's office, Emily is jealous. Emily takes the job to decorate Mrs. Rossiter's house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

IT WAS on her last day at the Rossiters, that she caught sight of Kent. A tall boy in white flannels on the tennis court far across the grounds. She walked in radiance for a long time after that.

That was the day he, too, glimpsed her, a demure little figure going down the drive. He hesitated only a moment, rather puzzled by the delight that swept him, before he set out on pursuit.

But the moment was that much too long; she had disappeared when he reached the street.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE job at Highcliffe ended officially with Frances' inspection.

The sharp eyes saw everything; the long, stained fingers ran over the hangings, the furniture, the walls. Emily watched anxiously but Frances only mumbled "Humph!" many times and kept turning her square, solid self about.

Mrs. Rossiter, however, had more to say.

"She did as well as you could, Mrs. Haiden. And what a decided little thing she is! That stretch of space over there—I didn't in the least want it but she persuaded me. I see her point now, of course. You'll be having a rival one of these days."

Frances grunted "Perhaps."

"She's angry with me," Emily concluded. "Though that isn't like her. A sad thing to lose such a friend—to lose Frances. If I might tell her how well I meant!"

But when they were driving back to the shop the keen face looked so forbidding that she could only wait miserably.

Once inside, Frances opened her desk briskly and began to do a great lot of figuring. Finally she nodded at Emily who sat by mutely, hands pressed together.

"How much have you in the bank, girl?"

It wasn't much; three hundred and forty-eight dollars and ninety-six cents.

"Buy a car with the ninety-six cents. You want to go into business?"

"Do I!"

"For a thousand dollars down you can have a third interest in this she-bang. Live on your salary and turn back your share of profits to pay the remainder."

"But—go in with you? If I could! You see it's taken all this time to save the three hundred. Years and years for the rest. Be an old lady in a wheel-chair then."

"Humph! Forgetting your commission on this last job, aren't you?"

"Commission? You don't mean—"

"I mean I figure 10 per cent of any job above cost of labor and material as the price of what's in my head. Judgment, taste, experience. It was what's in your head this time."

"But—"

"You've earned it, Emily. Don't doubt that. I never have seen a better piece of work."

"Truly? You mean it, dear Frances? And I thought you were offended!" Her eyes were brimming now; she put out a small hand.

Frances laughed and took the hand. "Don't be sensitive, dear. It's egotism turned upside down. How about it; do I get a new partner or not? Growing too old to manage this racket alone, seems to me."

"As if you could! I never can thank you—oh, you're giving me what I wanted most of everything in the world!"

But Frances shook her gray head. "Not most, dear. Life is made up of substitutes largely. Still all things are possible to a high heart."

Very cryptic that might have sounded, but it never occurred to Emily to doubt that Frances knew what was in every closed and secret corner of her thought.

A man whom she often met in the salon at Great View once told her that Mrs. Haiden had an "X-ray mind."

"She sees through and beyond things that baffle others," he explained. "And she is almost too logical. Give her a bit of a situation, ever so tiny a shred of it, and she will construct the whole thing for you as quickly as you can think.

"She will say, 'That is so, therefore this and this must be so, too.' And always it is so. A remarkable woman, that Mrs. Haiden."

Remarkable—yes. Years ago when Emily was a kid at school she fell in love with Kent Rossiter. A little girl from up The Hill, daughter of Steve Day, the factory hand. A small nobody weaving dreams about the son of the town banker, and patrician.

A school-day thing of no more consequence, one would say, than a child hanging up a stocking on Christmas eve or hunting fairy rings under the evergreens on a summer morning.

But it had influenced her whole life and Frances understood. And now she said all things were possible to the high heart.

A warm glow of affection for the homely, middle-aged woman swept Emily. She threw her arms around the square shoulders and cried a little before she went tearing up the hill to tell Agnes the news.

"Muz, what do you think? Seven hundred dollars' commission and I'm going to buy a share in Frances' shop!"

Agnes showed no elation. "Seven hundred dollars is more than your father and I had to start housekeeping. I hope Marty'll not take it amiss."

"But you don't understand, dear. I'll have my own business now!"

"And what business does a woman want more than her husband's home? You'd better have saved the money, Emmy. It would have given the lad a fair start."

"Oh, you'd spoil it for me, Muz! You'd do that! And it means so much to us."

The tired old hand went up, ropes standing out along the back. Emily choked back a protest and laid her cheek against the mouse-colored head.

"Marty won't need any help from me, dear. He can manage better than most."

"You'll not give him up, Emmy? It's only I want you safe, baby."

Kitten, who was watching, grinned in a singularly impish way.

Frances went to Benny Hahn who handled most of Lyall's law business and had papers all drawn up to be signed. Very important Emily felt, very much the successful young business woman as she dipped her pen and wrote her signature half a dozen times across the pages.

Mr. Hahn smiled broadly and congratulated her; then she followed Frances back to the shop.

Already a workman was changing the name on the window. Below the "Frances Haiden" he was marking in neat, gold lettering, "Emily Day." She watched for a moment in a vivid breathlessness; then a rich exuberance came beating at her throat. She felt as she had on the morning when the sun struck a blinding ray from the summit of North Mountain.

Achievement! She had done this, climbed a bit. Not the heights yet, but a way up. She would go on, reach the top. Aristocracy of achievement—what did she care for the Tin Badge of Caste? For blue blood?

No such heady thrill in knowing an ancestor had done a great thing as there was in your own fine accomplishment.

She thought of Kent and hoped he'd see her name on the window some day. Marty already knew; he waved at her from across the street. Kingdon Coles she didn't remember at all.

She was so wrapped up in pride that she paid no attention to a car which almost brushed her as it spun by. When it turned the corner she caught a glimpse of red hair and a flutter of green.

"Looked like Kitten," she thought, absently.

But the gold lettering flashed in the sun and she forgot the car.

CHAPTER XXXV.

LIFE took on a luminous charm.

Each day came softly, like a splendid new adventure, bearing magic gifts. Emily moved in radiance, proud as a young queen, happier than ever she had been before.

She did much of the work now that Frances had cared for. When there was a job to be executed it was Emily who made inspection and recommendation subject, of course, to her partner's approval. A big movie theater which came to Lyall and called in the firm was handled by Emily practically unassisted.

A great triumph this was for her and her share of the commission went a long way on the amount owing for the third interest.

Greenery out the River Road grew dark and dusty and lawns were strewn with yellow leaves; the Hudson took on the look of running sapphire and the air held wistfulness, like a lingering caress, which is summer's farewell.

It was nearing election time and every day now the opposing newspapers waged bitter and wordy wars with each other over candidates for office. The Item continued to back up Kent Rossiter and, strangely enough as it seemed to Emily, the Star did not oppose him.

Marty, now established in Judge Morrow's office, grinned when she mentioned this.

"What about it?"

"But I thought the Judge owned the Star? You mean he wants Kent for the place? I sort of thought—you see, I imagined—well, I guess maybe the Judge isn't unreasonable as some people say."

"Clever, aren't you? But not so clever with your own affairs." He said it lightly but there was a curious expression in the tawny eyes.

"What affairs, Marty? I thought I was managing very well."

"I'll say just this; better keep an eye on that kid sister. She'll stand watching."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Planning for Fall and Winter Seasons Takes Attention of Social Leaders During Summer

HOSTESSES' CHAIRMAN :-: HOME FROM VACATION TRIP :-: MUSICIAN WEDS

NO MATTER how blank the social calendar may be, and it certainly couldn't be much blanker than it will be during July and August, there's always one most engrossing activity besides life in the summer society colonies—planning society events for the fall and winter season. And it is in the long weeks of the summer, you know, that much of the planning for debuts, weddings, dances and benefits is done. Debut dates are almost invariably planned in the early summer.

Now that the "buds" of Pittsburgh's "little season" have nodded to the social world of their parents, debut dates for the fall will be gradually made known. The very first debut date announced for the autumn is of unusual interest, for the debutante-to-be is a member of one of Pittsburgh's most prominent families, the Henry Oliver Evanses, of South Negley avenue. They will present their charming young daughter Louise at a tea-dance in the University Club on September 22. Louise probably will be about the first debutante of the coming season to be presented to society. Last year the first debut date, if I remember correctly, was November 1, when the Walter Cockrill Taylors presented their daughter Florence.

Without a doubt Louise will be much feted. And among the entertainments in her honor will be a ball, I hear, to be given in December in the Pittsburgh club by her brother, Oliver Evans.

TODAY will be marked by what probably will be the last notable wedding of the summer season in Pittsburgh—that of Marjorie Harbison, daughter of the Ralph Warner Harbisons, of Sewickley; and Walter Brooke Stabler, son of the Caleb Stablers of Wilmington.

Right up to the very last hour, it seems, there have been entertainments for Marjorie. Today Grace Clarke will give a luncheon at the Edgeworth Club for members of the bridal party. The out-of-town guests here for the wedding are to be entertained at a luncheon today at the Allegheny Country Club, I hear, by Mrs. William E. Frick.

Saturday Betty Wray entertained the girls of the bridal party at a luncheon, and Saturday night Barbara Book gave the rehearsal dinner.

ONE of the last of the June weddings in New York has much interest for Pittsburgh folks, for the bridegroom is a Pittsburgh man—William Sherman Stevenson, son of Judge Junior Josiah Stevensons, of Kansas City. Mr. Stevenson and Ruth Carpenter Noyes, youngest daughter of Mrs. Walter Chadwick Noyes, of New York, were married Saturday afternoon in the Fifth avenue home of the bride's mother. The only Pittsburgher in the bridal party was the bridegroom's brother Josiah Stevenson III. The young Stevensons will not live in Pittsburgh, I understand, but will reside in New York upon their return from a motor trip through the South.

AN engagement I am sure you will be interested in has just been announced in Sewickley. It is that of Dorothy Darsie Scaife to John Wyman Judson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Judson, of New York and Stamford, Conn. Dorothy, you know, is a daughter of the William Marcelin Scaifes, of Sewickley.

ITALY and Switzerland and France always attract many American society folks in the summer as well as in the winter. The Wenman Armstrong Hicks sailed from New York recently for Europe. In addition to visiting the countries usually favored by summer visitors, they will go to Austria, too. They expect to be back in Pittsburgh on August 8.

MRS. J. EDGAR MORRIS and her son, Jack E. Morris, motored from their summer cottage in Conneaut, O., to Pittsburgh before attending the wedding of Sara Moreland, daughter of Andrew W. Moreland, and Harold Trowbridge Levett, son of the George H. Levetts, of Elizabeth, N. J., which took place Saturday at Spring Lake, N. J., the Moreland summer home. The Morrises will remain on the shore of Lake Erie until mid-September, I hear.

ELIZABETH FARQUHAR, daughter of J. G. Farquahars, of Beechwood boulevard, has returned from the East, where she attended the Yale-Harvard regatta in New London, Conn., and the wedding of Clarita Mestres and Charles Moeser in New York. The Farquehars are now at their summer home on Fox Chapel road.

AT a luncheon given Saturday in McCreery's by Mrs. C. P. Ritchie, announcement was made of the engagement of her sister, Miss Margaret J. Duvall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Duvall, of Crafton Heights, to Reuben Lee, Jr., of Wilkinsburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Lee, of Yolyn, W. Va. A late fall wedding is planned.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the engagement of Miss Janet Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Fraser, of Ben Avon, to Mahlon Everett Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow S. Lewis, of Ben Avon.

DR. AND MRS. WILLIAM A. BRADSHAW and family, of Fifth avenue, have returned after spending the winter, spring and early summer in the Southwest.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Pigs and Leghorns By EUDORA RICHARDSON

PHOEBE CARY, in a white chiffon and flaming scarf, propped her elbows squarely upon the cold silver beside her plate and surveyed the crowd at the night club with sincere dissatisfaction. The same high balls, the same men, the same cigarets, the same girls, time after time. Life had ceased to be the least exciting.

A youth tugged at her arm.

"Come on, Phoebe, let's trot the jazz."

"Please, Dick, for once don't be yourself. I've danced my feet into locomotor ataxia. I'd like to see one of those things I've seen advertised for people to sleep on."

"Oh, listen to my girl friend posing as a fragile flower. Snap out of that role, darling. It's not becoming."

Phoebe shrugged away from the tugging hand.

"If you've got to be a gad-fly, buzz around someone else. I tell you I'm unconscious."

"Aw, that's fine enthusiasm just after a fellow's proposed to you. You accepted, didn't ja?"

"I don't know. Maybe. What'll we do all our lives? Come to night clubs?"

"What's the matter, Phoebe? Didja have morphine with your dinner? My old man's giving me 10,000 a month when I settle down. You can spend it."

"That's my idea of not a darned thing to do. Run along now. When I wake up, we can talk things over."

Phoebe closed her eyes, and leaned back.

"Oh, here she is," a voice called through the clatter.

"Phoebe Cary alone! Isn't it a scream?"

Phoebe opened her eyes wearily. Clare Dameron, with a new man in tow, smiled down upon her.

"This is John Pendleton," Clare rattled on. "Used to know you in another life somewhere. He's looked all over for you after calling your apartment and finding you were in one of a dozen places.

"You're right," the young man grinned, his smile as cheerful as a summer day. "If I've changed as much as you have, you couldn't very well remember. Your hair was ringlets all over your head, and you slept in a hammock stretched between pine trees. You had a disagreeable way of not liking to be waked by a straw tickling your nose."

"Nobody wakes me any more because I've stopped sleeping," Phoebe countered.

Suddenly Clare was claimed by a gangling youth who jay-walked through a dance somewhat after the manner of a kangaroo. As John Pendleton dropped into a chair, Phoebe did a rather bungled job of yawn suppressing.

"Isn't this the life?" she moaned. "How did you ever tear yourself away from the green fields and sunsets and all that?"

"They're good enough," John Pendleton smiled, "but a fellow needs the bright lights now and then."

"Fancy that," Phoebe sighed, "when there's a hammock under a tree."

"Yes, but there are pigs and chickens to feed."

"'A wee little pig with a curly tail, all soft and white and pinky pale'," Phoebe quoted, "and a lovely white leghorn and chickens. Glorious!"

John Pendleton smiled appreciatively.

"I like it, and your father did," he replied. "Our roots extend about two hundred years into the soil of the plantations. But how your mother hated it! I was a youngster when she left, but I can remember vaguely.

"Any chance of your taking me away from this club before that night hound I'm with insists on keeping me in his kennel till daybreak?" Phoebe inquired irrelevantly. "Howling doesn't help."

"Of course," John Pendleton agreed. "Perhaps we'd better hurry."

"I'm not very keen tonight," Phoebe continued as she gathered up her wrap, "but I think I remember you, John Pendleton. You're some sort of kinsman of mine, and you live near my father's plantation, where I lived when I was a baby. That hammock sounds like paradise."

When Phoebe let herself into the showy Park Avenue apartment with John Pendleton in her wake, her mother and step-father were alone in the living room.

"Why, darlings, what does this mean?" Phoebe drawled. "Getting Victorian and chaperoning daughters at midnight? Mother, you ought to remember this boy friend I've brought to see you."

Delicia Denman, formerly Della Cary of The Plains, looked about her with an effort at seriousness.

"Your father is dead," she announced in a strained voice.

A shudder passed through the girl, and she closed her eyes a moment.

"I wish I could remember him," she said softly.

"He's left you The Plains and the $5,000 conditionally. If you don't live there, it goes to a distant cousin by the name of John Pendleton."

"No wonder the sunburned hero looked me up," Phoebe remarked rather too casually. "Well, I guess I can farm as well as he can. This is John Pendleton, and if you don't mind, I'd like to be left alone to talk business with him."

"John Pendleton!" Delicia gasped. "Just a bad, little boy when I saw you last."

"Unchanged perhaps," smiled the distant kinsman. "I came to New York to tell Phoebe that I have waived any claim to the place that the will may give me. It's hers whether she lives there or not."

"How good of you!" Delicia beamed.

"Magnaimous," corroborated the step-father, breaking the long silence.

"Bunk!" snapped Phoebe. "Now run along."

The parent and step-parent withdrew obediently, and Phoebe faced her benefactor.

"No gifts from you, Cousin John," she laughed. "I'm going down to feed those pale pigs and white chickens—and to rest in that hammock. I will let you do something for me, however."

"Everything," John Pendleton offered comprehensively.

"Just help me learn to farm."

"That's doing something for myself. It's rather lonely at The Maples since you went away. I wouldn't let myself really hope that you'd come."

"But you wanted me?"

"Lord, child, did I?" In all the years nobody has taken your place."

"Nobody to wake with a straw?"

"Nobody to claw my eyes for doing it. It may be because I'm so in love with you, Phoebe, that I can't reason well, but I can't see why it's necessary for you and me to live on separate plantations. Can you?"

Phoebe lifted eyes that were no longer bored and weary.

"I certainly can not," she said as John Pendleton's arms went about her.

Don't fool yourself:

Since halitosis never announces itself to the victim, you simply cannot know when you have it.

The ring came back -with a bottle

The ring came back with a bottle—a bottle of Listerine—which explained more clearly than words that halitosis was the reason for breaking the engagement.

Brutal? Not at all. Halitosis is avoidable and therefore inexcusable. People who permit themselves to have it, do not deserve much consideration.

Don't fool yourself that you never offend this way. You simply cannot know—because halitosis doesn't announce itself to the victim. The one way to make sure of yourself is to rinse the mouth systematically with Listerine every day—especially before meeting others.

Listerine ends halitosis because it is a powerful deodorant.

If you need proof of this, rub a bit of onion on your hand and then apply Listerine clear. Immediately, the odor is gone. Even the strong odor of fish yields to this treatment.

Knowledge of Mechanical Flight Old as Man

SECOND NEWS SECTION THE SUN TELEGRAPH SPORTS FEATURES

MONDAY, JULY 2, 1928

BYRD GETS DEGREE

Commander Richard E. Byrd, has received the honorary degree of Doctor of Aeronautical Science at the sixty-sixth commencement exercises of the Pennsylvania Military College, Chester, Pa. It was the first time that such a degree has been awarded. Look at his "diploma."

Early Man Learned That "Kite" Surface Would Keep Body Aloft

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd maintains that the dangers of flying are not near as great as they are supposed to be. He believes that with reasonable perfection and training that is available today aviation is thoroughly safe. He describes two kinds of fatal accidents. One kind is the result of experimental or pioneering work; the other from fliers whose planes lack proper repair and inspection facilities.

Now go on with the story.

Public Is Severe Critic

CHAPTER II.

I KNOW a young flier who had got his pilot's license in the Reserve Corps. He was so passionately fond of flying that he could hardly wait to have his own machine and set up a taxi service near his home town. He didn't have enough capital to buy an expensive plane.

About that time he met a man who had bought up a lot of wartime junk from the government. Among the junk was a discarded plane of ancient vintage.

"I'll let you have it for $300," said the junk dealer, "provided you take it out of here this week."

The youngster closed the deal and set about tinkering on the old crock. Just as his time was up he hopped off. He flew safely to his home town, and managed to start business there taking passengers up for rides at five dollars a head.

Then one morning he went aloft in a gusty breeze. As the machine wasn't designed as well as later models it soon became unmanageable and crashed.

The passenger was killed and the young pilot badly hurt. Next day the morning paper carried glaring headlines of "ANOTHER FATAL AIRPLANE ACCIDENT!"

Whereupon there ensued the following conversation at thousands of breakfast tables all over the country.

"Heavens, here's another horrible airplane accident! 'Passenger crushed to death; pilot escapes with painful injuries'!"

"Too bad it wasn't the pilot. There ought to be a law against flying!"

It is interesting to record that almost exactly this same sort of opinion was once held about railroads.

In 1845 Sir Samuel Hoare seriously made a report to his country that "The largest item in railway returns bids fair to be the list of killed."

Flying also suffers from the fixed idea in the public mind that it is just a new species of human lunacy.

The Wright Brothers are said to have invented or discovered flying in 1903. This is not so.

To deny it in no sense reflects on that pair of gifted pioneers, who certainly were the first to fly, even if they didn't actually discover the art.

Flight Knowledge Old

The idea and some knowledge of mechanical flight is as old as man.

Before the dawn of written language man captured birds and saw that enough speed with proper "kite" surface would keep a body aloft. This is not encyclopedic romancing on my part.

I was for a time with the Smith Sound Eskimos of North Greenland. This little tribe is still in the Stone Age.

Well do I remember Nucarpingwaq freezing a huge dead burgomaster gull with outstretched wings, then tossing it off cliff to show me how it could fly. "Had I material, White Man," said the native hunter, "I am sure I could build wings big enough for man to fly with."

As early as 400 B. C. a flying chariot was constructed of a balloon and paddles.

Leonardo da Vinci, who died in 1519, left behind him not only the Mona Lisa, but a series of sketches that showed a knowledge of the principles of aeronautics.

Engineers for three centuries have declared that human flight merely awaited a power plant light enough to carry itself and a pair of wings aloft.

Swift improvement of the steam engine in the nineteenth century awakened new hopes in those who knew how near flight was.

Langley's Achievement

Langley actually built and flew a small model plane in 1896, using a 1½-horsepower engine. He might have flown a full-sized machine of the same design shortly afterwards had it not been damaged by accident and his own death hastened by ridicule. His machine with some changes was years later actually flown by a pilot, Glenn Curtis.

In the meantime an obscure device had been developing that carried the final factor for achieving human flight. This was the internal combustion gas engine. Its distinguishing feature lay in the fact that its fuel burned in its cylinder and not in a furnace.

The first one was built about 1850. It weighed more than 500 pounds per horsepower. Advent of the automobile in 1900 gave this much-despised form of power a terrific impetus.

In a few years engines were being built by Ford and others at weights as low as 25 pounds per horsepower.

At almost exactly this point flight becomes theoretically possible. Immutable physics created by the Almighty before the earth was born fix from 25 pounds to 30 pounds per horsepower as the maximum weight an engine can lift off the ground, provided adequate wings are used.

Now the Wrights had ingeniously developed appropriate wing surfaces in their gliders.

So, in a sense, their fine industry was rewarded by a great piece of luck; it was exercised just at the time the gas engine reached the arbitrary point of which I have just spoken.

With magnificent skill the brothers put together an engine that weighed only 13 pounds per horsepower, thus giving them about 12 pounds per horsepower to be used on wings and body.

This proved enough. And on December 19, 1903, near Kitty Hawk, S. C., the first true flying machine rose with a pilot, Wilbur Wright, and driven by a six-bladed propeller attached to a gas engine, flew 852 feet in 59 seconds.

Meanwhile the first great patron of the gas engine, the automobile, was galloping ahead. In 1900 newspaper editorials literally prayed to the Almighty for deliverance from the curse that was upon us in the shape of the horseless carriage. In 1910 accidents to racing cars alone were enough to make one's blood run cold.

War injected another factor into flying. Military exigency stood for speed at the expense of safety. The fastest plane was the best fighter. The idea of high flying speed is still a strong one. Some of our prize races have been as tragic as the early automobile races were.

It would not be fair for me to make a blanket condemnation of speed contests. They have brought out many defects in engine and fuselage and have helped to develop our fast combat planes.

But I am profoundly pleased to find that they are gradually giving way in popularity to reliability and endurance contests, which will ultimately do for the plane what they did for the automobile—establish its feasibility for us by the average man or woman.

It is true that in England and the United States there have been apparently an unreasonable number of casualties in army and naval flying, but it must be remembered that this work is largely experimental and pioneering and that the fliers must engage in dangerous tactical maneuvervs.

On top of all this there is the very important fact that the Army and Navy flier cannot, in the nature of his work, put safety first, as the commercial flier must do.

Take just one sample of mass misfortune from my own service. This came in the 1926 race for the Schneider trophy, one of the most important air meets ever held.

The Schneider trophy is given for seaplanes only. The great interest in the 1926 contest rose chiefly from the fact that Italy was a close contender for the cup which had been won twice in succession by Americans.

The U. S. Navy team suffered its first loss when my friend, Lieut. Frank Conant, U. S. N., was drowned just before the contest in a service pursuit plane. He was flying low over Hampton Roads, which in places is filled with fishnets during the season of the race. It is believed that one of his pontoons struck a net mooring stake.

To condemn flying in Conant's plane on the basis of such an accident would be like condemning a make of car because the driver was unfortunate enough to strike a hidden stump in the road.

A week later the preliminary trials for the main event were held. They were marred by a number of unfortunate accidents of a minor nature leading up to a complete wreck of the Navy's most promising entry, a fine Packard-engined racer piloted by Lieut. Tomlinson.

In landing on choppy water he had the luck to capsize his ship and was nearly drowned. It is possible his pontoons were too small.

The important point I want to make is that this contest was one for speed. Therefore, every item of weight and air resistance was cut to the bone.

But much of the public saw only

DO YOU KNOW YOUR OWN "TRAFFIC COP?"

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else, yell, "Hi Teddy!" Well, the Sun-Telegraph's series "Traffic Cops," will tell you how. This fellow today may be found in East Liberty, but don't spend the day hunting for him when The Sun-Telegraph will tell you his name tomorrow.

SATURDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS NICHOLAS MODRAK 143 SOUTH 16TH STREET, WHO HAS SPENT SEVEN OF HIS 14 YEARS AS A PATROLMAN IN DIRECTING TRAFFIC. HE IS AT WEBSTER AVENUE, TUNNEL STREET, AND BIGELOW BOULEVARD.

DRAMATIST HOPWOOD DROWNS

NICE, France, July 2.—(AP.)—Avery Hopwood, American playwright, was drowned within sight of life savers and while the crowd in the beach watched last night at Juan-Les-Pins on the French Riviera.

Hopwood, apparently in good health, went swimming soon after dinner. He collapsed when far from the shore and drowned before help could reach him.

The playwright had been resting here after a short tour of Europe. He intended to leave for Paris in a few days and then return to New York.

Graduating from the University of Michigan in 1905, Avery Hopwood went to New York as special correspondent for the Cleveland Leader and almost immediately sold his first play, "Clothes," written in collaboration with Channing Pollock and produced in 1906. He was 24 years old at the time, having been born in Cleveland in 1882.

From that time forward he was one of the most prolific playwrights.

His best known plays were "Fair and Warmer," "The Gold Diggers" and "The Bat," written in collaboration with Mary Roberts Rinehart. "The Bat" was one of the biggest money makers ever staged.

His other successful plays included "The Demi-Virgin," "Naughty Cinderella," "The Powers That Be," "This Man and This Woman," "Our Little Wife," "Double Exposure," "The Great Illusion," "Why Men Leave Home," "Little Miss Bluebeard" and "The Harem."

TWO AIR RACERS FORCED DOWN ON MOUNTAIN

International News Service

DETROIT, July 2.—With seven of the 12 balloons in the Gordon Bennett international race reported down, there appeared today to be little chance for those still in the air to beat last year's distance record of 800 miles.

Mild winds and low pressure area have hindered the progress of the balloons. The remaining five bags are expected to land today or tonight.

Two of the balloons made dangerous landings on mountain sides in West Virginia.

According to reports to the Board of Commerce, the United States has one entry, an Army bag, piloted by W. E. Kepner, still in the race; Germany has two and France two.

The Detroit, manned by William C. Naylor, landed on a mountain near Cass, W. Va., and the Wallonie, Belgian entry, piloted by Joseph Thomard, came down on a mountainside near Beverly, W. Va.

The Denmark entry, in charge of S. A. U. Rasmussen, was reported down near Roanoke, Va.

The German balloon Ernest Brandenberg, piloted by Capt. Otto Bertram, made a landing at Davis, W. Va.

Texas is getting all ready to vote for Al. They kinder wanted a dry candidate, but they would rather have a wet than lose the postoffices.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

ANTICIPATION of the joys of our vacation, which starts with tomorrow's issue, is tinctured with misgivings. When we asked the boss if we could go on our vacation, beginning tomorrow, we did not especially like the way he seemed to leap at the proposition. We were hopeful that he would frown and say: "I'll have to think that over for awhile and let you know later." But it was not like that. The moment we mentioned a vacation he said: "Why, certainly. Why not?"

We wanted a decent interval after the word was broken gently to the staff that we were going to take a two-week respite, and then we sneaked into the circulation department. We had a vision of the poor circulation manager, upon being told of what was to happen, swooning away while crying: "It can't be true." but, unfortunately, five minutes after the news of our vacation was flashed we heard him saying to his staff: "Now, boys, we must strike while the iron is hot. This is the opportunity to put on a few more thousands—and we have two full weeks to do it in."

IT WAS our suggestion that we make announcement of the vacation period, for we didn't want a lot of telegrams and letters pouring in with congratulations under the false notion that we were gone forever. At first we suggested a four-column box on page one saying:

"Don't Worry—Merely a Vacation for Sidewalks," with a paragraph or so calling attention to the fact that President Coolidge was summering in Wisconsin and that, by a coincidence, while the President was away from Washington, Boyle also would be away. But this suggestion didn't go over so well.

Things are not so bad as they may seem. After all, we always will be within hailing distance by telegram, and, if the worst should happen, we can be recalled before our vacation is over. Naturally, we don't want any dirty work at the cross-roads, for instance, a telegram, which we may at first think is a summons to rush back, which may read: "Your Vacation Making Great Hit With Public." We want only telegrams of distress.

* * *

IN THE meantime, this space will limp along somehow. We understand that Will Rogers will be given this space. Mr. Rogers is very good, too.

Two Stolen Idols

By FRANK L. PACKARD

The Cypher in the Idol Is the Key to a Great Fortune

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved ivory idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Bob finds Java Dick in Singapore, who promises his help in solving the mystery.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLII.

"SAHIB,!" Hsi Yan raised himself on the couch, and reached out his arms entreatingly, and the blood came to his lips, and I, Mindar Singh, thought even then that the moment of death had come. But it was not yet to be, for Hsi Yan spoke again.

"'There is no deviltry,' he said. 'For many years I harbored evil in my heart against you, and against your brother, and against one other, and I cannot die without making proof that my remorse is great. Is that hard to believe, Capt. Tom? Well, you will believe me in a minute, for I have come to make you the richest man in all the Archipelago. Could there be any greater proof that I would be at peace with you? Is there any one to whom this wealth would be better given that to one who was once an enemy, but whom, in dying, I ask that I may call my friend?'

"Sahib, Kingsley Sahib stood there and said nothing. And I know not what was in his mind, but his face was troubled. And Hsi Yan lay back and closed his eyes in his great weakness, for indeed, Sahib, but little strength was left. And then Kingsley Sahib gave orders that I should bring brandy, but Hsi Yan shook his head. 'I do not want it, and 'tis but a waste of time and will have no effect,' he said; 'but let your servant leave the room.' And Kingsley Sahib ordered me to go.

But, Sahib, I did not go far. Will the Sahib say that I did ill in this? It was not because it was in my heart to listen, but because I feared for Kingsley Sahib and what might come to pass—not because of Hsi Yan, Sahib, but because of Hsi Yan's men that, at that moment, I knew had never gone far away as he had ordered them to do, for I saw what Kingsley Sahib, whose back was to the veranda, could not see. Sahib, in the light for an instant there glittered a pair of eyes that stared through the palings of the veranda rail, though no face could be seen. I liked not what I saw, Sahib, and thus it was that I went no further than the other room, and there from Kingsley Sahib's desk I took Kingsley Sahib's revolvers. And I came back and stood behind the door between the two rooms where I could not be seen, and yet where I could see into the room where Hsi Yan lay upon the couch, and Kingsley Sahib stood by the table beside Hsi Yan, and where I could see out through the open doors to the veranda. Will the Sahib say that I did ill?"

Bob Kingsley, leaning forward now, his elbows on the arms of his chair, his chin cupped in his hands, listening intently, shook his head.

"No, no! Go on!" he said.

Mindar Singh bent low his head. "The Sahib is like in heart unto Kingsley Sahib that I served," he said, "and I am grateful for his words. And now, Sahib, the tale grows stranger still. Sahib, as I, Mindar Singh, listened and watched, Hsi Yan told Kingsley Sahib of a great treasure he had found only a few days before, which was one of those treasures that had come about by the gathering together in a secret place of the money and jewels and cargoes from many ships that had been taken by murder and piracy in those days that are long gone now when the seas were not safe from the Orang-laut—one of those treasures, Sahib, of which the Malays tell many tales, that have never since come to the eye of man for the reason, it may be, that those who gathered it by bloodshed were in turn destroyed. Also, he told Kingsley Sahib that, as he said Kingsley Sahib knew, he had lived a life that was not far removed from that even of the Orang-laut who all their lives had mocked at the law; and he told Kingsley Sahib that it was because of the ill life he led that he had been in search of some place well hidden from those who passed upon the sea, and yet where junks and ships might come and go secretly and in all weathers without danger to themselves. Sahib, he said the hiding place he sought was for the storing of opium, so that it might be brought and loaded in safety from the law by those who would sail with it to the Sahib's lands across the seas. And thus it was that Hsi Yan in search of such a place went ashore alone from his junk and fell upon the treasure of which he had spoken.

"But he did not touch the treasure, for he trusted not his men who sailed with him in the junk. Therefore he made measurements and note of where the treasure lay, and that he might not forget, and that no one else might read what he wrote, he set down all these things in secret writing, and returned to the junk, and set sail for Singapore to make plans for a voyage back again in another vessel with only such men as he feared not to trust. But, Sahib, on the next day, he was stricken down with so sore an attack of a malady he had had for many years that he knew the end was near. And then because death was approaching, and because the course of the junk lay past Kalawa, he remembered Kingsley Sahib, and, wishing to die in peace with Kingsley Sahib, he gave orders that the junk go to Kalawa and that he be taken to Kingsley Sahib's house.

"All these things, Sahib, he told Kingsley Sahib as I, Mindar Singh, listened. And there came sorrow and pain into Kingsley Sahib's face, for Hsi Yan fought for his breath that he might speak, and blood came always on Hsi Yan's lips. And many times Kingsley Sahib made offer to aid Hsi Yan, but Hsi Yan would not suffer it. And all this time Hsi Yan had not named the place where the treasure had been found; but now he placed upon the table two little idols that were carved in ivory, and so alike that one could not be told from the other. Then Sahib, from beneath the hands of each idol he took out a small piece of paper upon which was the secret writing he had made. And the writing on one paper could not be read without that which was on the other paper, and Hsi Yan told Kingsley Sahib how the secret writing could be read so that Kingsley Sahib should find the treasure that—"

Bob Kingsley was on his feet.

"You heard that?" he cried excitedly. "You know what's in that cipher?"

Mindar Singh shook his head.

"Sahib," he answered gravely, "I do not know the words of the secret writing, for they were not spoken that night, and, because of what I have still to tell, the writing was not made into English by Kingsley Sahib; but with that which I have now got I know how the writing may be read."

"Now got!" exclaimed Bob Kingsley. "What do you mean by that? What is it that you've got, Mindar Singh?"

"I will tell the Sahib in a minute," replied Mindar Singh; "unless" — deferentially — "it is the Sahib's wish that I go first now to the end of the tale itself?"

"No! All right!" Bob Kingsley jerked out. "Tell it your own way, Mindar Singh!"

Mindar Singh again inclined his head.

"Thus, then, it was, Sahib," he said. "At the moment that Hsi Yan had made an end of telling Kingsley Sahib how the secret writing might be read, I, Mindar Singh, saw more than the glitter of a man's eyes that I had seen before through the palings of the veranda rail. Sahib, I saw I know not how many of the Chinese dogs begin to creep over the veranda rail, and in their hands, Sahib, they carried weapons—but they made no sound. And then I, Mindar Singh, gave a cry to warn Kingsley Sahib, and even as I cried out I ran with all my strength across the room and closed the door to the veranda upon the Chinese, but they were so close then, Sahib, that their faces were not a hand's-breadth away as I made fast the doors. And then, Sahib, there came to my ears a sound the like of which may I never hear again. Has the Sahib ever heard the laughter of a dying man? I know not where he got his strength, but Hsi Yan was sitting upright on the couch, and he swayed with laughter till the tears from his eyes ran down his cheeks and mingled with the blood upon his lips. And to me, Mindar Singh, who had closed the doors, he cried out, as he laughed, that I was too late.

Care of the Stove

The top of the stove should be rubbed with newspaper every time it is used. Any spot of grease left for next time will make its presence felt as soon as it is heated. When frying, cooking onions, or boiling greens, a few grains of coffee on the hot stove will cause the pleasant and potent fragrance of coffee, which will predominate over the unpleasant cooking odors.

Costume Jewelry

The modernistic trend has entered the field of [illegible] and much of the costume jewelry is made along those lines. If you use a little discrimination in choosing this type, you ought to have some striking and original necklaces and bracelets to wear with your new frocks. For there is nothing smarter or newer than some of the modern jewelry now being shown.

Swedish Cookies.

Cream together a cupful each of butter and sugar. When bleached add a beaten egg and a tablespoonful of grated bitter almonds, two cupfuls of sifted flour and a tablespoonful of homemade wine. Put through a pastry tube, cutting strips three inches long. Place on a buttered tin and bake in a hot oven a delicate brown.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

Skyward

By Commander Richard E. Byrd

A group of deplorable accidents resulting from a number of seaplane flights and at once was ready to condemn flying even more heartily than before.

Flights made for the promotion of aviation are for the sole purpose of ascertaining where and how the happy air traveler of the future will go.

When I say flying is safe I speak of the performance of ships that have been tested in design, cruising radius, manueverability and lifting power until these factors have been established, and the ships used in good weather over known routes where there are plenty of landing fields; in other words, with normal commercial flying conditions. To judge safety of aviation by experiments in which both pilots and designers are frankly and openly taking risks for the sake of aeronautic progress is like saying that a new breakfast food is poison because in the chemical experiments leading up to its invention one of the research workers had a violent attack of indigestion.

Balchen Likes Work

Bernt Balchen, the fine young Norwegian who went to Spitzbergen with me and was on the America with us when she flew to France, is a test pilot for a big airplane manufacturing company. When I asked him how he felt about his work he said:

"I like it because I take up planes that have never been flown before. Half the excitement is not knowing what is going to happen."

Then our plane, the America, crashed with three of us injured—Floyd Bennett critically. Our crash marked, I believe, the turning point. We were learning more about the three-engined plane. We repaired the America and carried on some very careful scientific experiments.

When we hopped off on our trans-Atlantic flight we did not know just how far our plane would go with the fuel abroad.

We simply made as many preliminary tests as possible and gradually increased the load until our figures indicated that we should make our destination. We had learned what we could about the maximum load such a three-engined plane would lift. It was pioneering and we knew it was risky.

If we had crashed on our take-off or suddenly run out of fuel before we got to France, the only just conclusion would have been that our experiment was a failure.

But when we got into the air and crossed the ocean we proved for the first time that a big plane with three motors designed like ours could do the trick.

Fathers, Brothers, Uncles, Cousins to Tote Caddies' Bags in Junior Tournament

FATHERS and brothers and uncles and cousins and just plain friends will serve as caddies for the junior and sub-junior golfers who will compete in The Sun-Telegraph's big West Penn championship tournament over the Schenley Park links Thursday of next week.

Thus will a pressing problem be solved. Virtually all of the caddies in the district are among the approximately 400 players already enrolled for the tournament, and a dearth of bag-toters was imminent. However, the situation will be taken care of by having other members of the youngsters' families act in that capacity for the contestants.

On all of the courses of the district the youngsters are practicing up for the tournament. They get out early in the morning and keep diligently at their preparation until the club members require their services. Not a one but thinks he will finish up among the top prize winners.

Entries for the affair close next Monday. If you haven't already got in line, don't delay.

PIRATES-CARDS SPLIT TWIN BILL

Fussell, Once Hero of War, Is Hero of Pirate Victory

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 2.—Unsung throughout the years, although he has been a star of the mound, the case of Fred Fussell, unassuming southpaw who rode to fame in St. Louis yesterday, is one of the strangest in sport.

Ten years ago the same quiet boy was rendered prostrate on the Meuse-Argonne battlefield when a machine gun bullet crashed through the fibulur bone of the right ankle.

The Three Hundred and Fifty-fifth Infantry of which Fussell was a member, was on a charge at the time. The boy lay on the ground for almost a whole day before the stretcher-bearers could get to him to carry him back out of No-man's Land. It was eight days before the soldier-athlete reached a base hos-

Only One Change In Buc Prices

THE new Federal regulation that went into effect last Friday abolishing the war tax on the prices of all amusement tickets up to $3 brought from President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, today the announcement of the scale of rates that will prevail hereafter for the Pirates' games at Forbes Field.

Only one change has been made in the ticket prices by the Pittsburgh club, that being on the general admission grandstand pasteboard. Heretofore the price of this ticket has been $1 for admisison and 10 cents war tax added. The 10 cents will be thrown off and hereafter a ticket good for unreserved grandstand seats will be sold for $1.

The old prices of $1.50 for reserved grandstand tickets, $1.75 for box seats and the bleacher prices of 50 and 75 cents will remain unchanged.

The other clubs in the major leagues have taken varied action in connection with the new regulation. Cincinnati has allowed all the old prices to stand, while some others, including the Brooklyn and New York Nationals, have raised the scale on reserved seats.

FUSSELL SCORES VICTORY IN FIRST

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 2.—The Pirates arrived at Donie Bush's home town this morning for the purpose of staging an exhibition game this afternoon with the Hoosiers of the American Association. The date is an off-day on the Pittsburgh schedule and the Indianapolis management desired to have the Buccos as an attraction.

Competing against the Freebooters today will be some boys of Pittsburgh affiliations. Adam Comorosky will be in the outfield for the Hoosiers and there is a likelihood that Emil Yde and Roy Spencer will be in action.

DISPLEASED OVER SPLIT

The Bushwhackers were not exactly satisfied with what they accomplished in St. Louis, the 50-50 split of yesterday being a poor bargain for the Buccos for several reasons. In the first place, the Pirates were eager to make a clean sweep of the double bill, so that they could have the edge over the Redbirds in the series; moreover, a double victory would have given the Pittsburghers an even break for the jaunt. As it was, they lost five of the eight games played in Chicago and St. Louis.

Yet out of the welter and swelter of the hottest day the Pirates have experienced this year, a figure arose to give comfort to the slumping Buccaneers. Fred Fussell, the Wichita Falls star, was assigned to the mound in the opener, and in the presence of 31,000 fans the recruit dished out a pretty helping of goose eggs to the flabbergasted home boys.

RARE FEAT

Shutting the Redbirds out this year is a rare achievement in view of the terrific punch of the club, but the new left-hander was able to do it in one of the smartest exhibitions one would care to see. Fussell had a good fast ball, a fine curve, and his intelligence on the slab was a thing of beauty. More than once he shook off Earl Smith, and whenever he did this he proceeded to fan or retire a batter.

The Pirates, meantime, were able to collect a couple of important tallies, the contest ending Pop was on his way to Lewisburg, Pa., where he opens a coaching school at Bucknell College today. He met Jock Sutherland, Pitt head coach and a former protege, while here and they cooled off by talking football chatter.

O'HARA'S 69 BEST IN STATE OPEN

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

PETER O'HARA, Westmoreland pro, scored a sensational 69 to pace the early 18-hole finishers in today's opening round in the annual Pennsylvania state open golf tournament at the Oakmont Country Club.

Although brilliant all the way, O'Hara achieved the greatest lights on the first nine holes, going out in 33. His round of 69 is one of the best ever played over the difficult Hulton layout. His card:

SHAW ENTERS AUTO RACE

One of the world's outstanding automobile drivers will be a contestant in the three Independence Day races sched led next Wednesday afternoon at the famous Bridgeville Speedway as a result of the last-minute entry blank received from Wilbur Shaw who finished fourth in the International 500-mile grind at Indianapolis in 1927.

Shaw has made an enviable record as a speed artist, being credited with numerous international records. Driving a Whippet Four Shaw is credited with making 118.3 miles per hour in a test on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla. Shaw will be among the drivers who will attempt to qualify tomorrow afternoon at the Bridgeville Speedway. The qualifying trials are scheduled to start at 5 o'clock.

More than 22 entries have been received for the Bridgeville races, according to the list which closed at midnight Saturday. Only 12 drivers will qualify for the 50-mile race, the four leaders in this event to compete in the final race of 25 miles. The first 25-mile grind will be for drivers that failed to qualify.

Numerous improvements have been made on the famous half-mile board bowl at Bridgeville and the track is in excellent shape for the holiday program. With the facilities for the parking of thousands of cars and free from dust and other annoyances, Bridgeville is making preparations to handle a record crowd Wednesday afternoon. The races will start promptly at 3 o'clock with capable officials in charge.

Fans Suspect Intended Frame May Have Been at Bottom of Roush Mystery—Fussell Comes Through as New Aid to Grimes, But Miljus Falters—Slab Slump Is Whole Trouble.

DID some one try to frame Eddie Roush and fail to get away with it? The average fan may be pardoned for suspecting something of the sort in view of the surprising outcome of the mysterious case.

Eddie Roush

It is announced that "an examination disclosed a torn muscle in Roush's stomach, and that Manager McGraw has given him a vacation of two weeks at his home in Indiana to enable him to regain his health." It is added that "the Giant officials were emphatic in saying that the player had not been suspended."

ALL OF which has a rather queer sound in view of previous chapters in the story of what looked very much like an attempt to get rid of Roush and his salary of $20,000—there was a bonus for signing, too—when it became apparent that he was about done as a big leaguer.

It is said the physical examination was made last Saturday, yet fans will recall that two weeks ago a similar statement was made to the effect that an X-ray examination had revealed a slight tear in the player's stomach.

About the same time waivers were asked on Eddie, further evidence of a desire to get rid of him.

THEN came Roush's rebellion and his action in deserting the New York club on the complaint that he was being trailed by detectives and "pussy-foot"

W.-J. TO PLAY AT EASTON

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 2.—W. & J. and Lafayette will likely continue their gridiron rivalry at Easton next fall unless present plans fail to materialize.

Rather confident of having its athletic field remodeled, with a stadium capable of seating at least 20,000 as one of the improvements, Washington and Jefferson College authorities asked for the privilege of staging the game. All other struggles in the series which had its beginning back in 1922 were arranged by the Lafayette management.

Borotra Bows to Tilden

WIMBLEDON, England, July 2. — (AP.) — William T. Tilden, American tennis ace, advanced to the semi-final round of the Wimbledon championship tournament today by defeating Jean Borotra, one of the French "Three Musketeers" by scores of 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Borotra did not go down without a struggle, forcing Tilden to 14 games to win the first set and taking the second with comparative ease. Tilden settled down thereafter, however, and swept the last two sets at top speed.

Tilden's victory carried him past the first of the formidable Frenchmen whom he must defeat to win the crown now held by Henri Cochet, of France. He remains as the sole surviving American contender for the championship, as John Hennessey, of Indianapolis, was eliminated by Cochet in an earlier match, 6-4, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3. Rene LaCoste also had won his way into the semi-final bracket, defeating Baron H. L. De Morpurgo, of Italy, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

The fourth place in the semi-final went to Christian Boussus, young Frenchman, when he defeated his countryman, Jacque Brugnon, in something of an upset, 12-10, 10-8, 6-2.

In the mixed doubles the American team of George Lott and Mrs. Molla Mallory won from the English combination, Donald Greig and Elsie Goldsack, 6-2, 6-4.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, California veteran, chop-stroked her way to victory over Mme. Nicolopoulo, of France, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, to enter the semi-finals.

pital where he received the proper attention.

The war was over, Fussell in the course of events was returned to the United States. His foot and ankle were in bad shape and he had little thoughts of baseball, despite the fact he loved the game.

A native of the middle-west, Fussell was turned over to the various specialists for treatment. Meantime he was given $25 per month compensation. This was not much, but it helped Fred to purchase some land in the western end of Nebraska.

Out of the game for almost five years as a result of his war injury, Fred eventually was able to use his foot in a manner almost normal.

Then he began to pitch for the semi-pro teams of his district and rejoiced in the improvement of his foot. It grew just about well.

WAS WITH CUBS

The next chapter in the career of the doughboy-pitcher has to do with the Chicago Cubs. One of the scouts of the Wrigley House of Baseball saw Fred do his stuff in the corn belt and the left-hander was offered a contract. So Fussell at 25 received a tryout with the Cubs. That was about five years ago. One of the first things of note that he accomplished was a defeat of the Pirates at Forbes Field.

But the jump from the corn circuit to the big show was too wide for one leap and before the season was over the Cubs passed Fred along to the minors. Fred worked for the Seattle Club for a time and eventually landed at Wichita Falls where he found himself.

The winning of the Texas League flag and the subsequent Dixie championship last year by Wichita Falls was due in a large measure to Fussell. He was well nigh unhittable in the Class A circuit, his exploits being of such a nature as to cause Scout Bob Tarleton to recommend the southpaw to Pittsburgh. The Pirates paid a big sum for Fred.

Just before the war broke out, Fred was close to a job with the New York Giants. As a boy, the left-hander was beginning to show real class in 1917 when the agents of McGraw camped on his trail. Then he passed into the army and out of the baseball picture for more than five years.

UP TO STAY?

On another occasion of his boyhood, the Washington Americans told him to come to St. Louis to join the club. Fussell was cutting wheat at the time and he had the misfortune to get the sharp knife against a pitching finger. It required medical skill to save the finger.

No Local Man Named

By TOM BIRKS.
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

MILWAUKEE, July 2.—With the selection of Armstrong Patterson, of Detroit, as president, the moving up of Elmer Schroeder, of Philadelphia, as first vice president, Bill Angus, of Cleveland, into the second vice president's chair, the bringing back of Winton E. Barker, of St. Louis, as third vice president, and the retention of Wilfred Cummings, of Chicago, as treasurer, giving the West the majority of positions, the annual convention of the United States Soccer Football Association came to an end here late last night in the banquet hall of the Hotel Schroeder.

But the West Penn Football Association paid a bitter price for its recent action of tying the hands of its delegates, for when the caucus ended yesterday afternoon, the voting power of the delegates present agreed to put over a Western Pennsylvania man, but this had to be abandoned owing to the council of the Pittsburgh association tying the hands of the delegates to the association. The finale of the convention was the most dramatic in the history of the association, for in the dying moments of the three-day session, the delegates from the American Soccer League made a last desperate stand to force the nomination of two of its officials into national office. But the delegates who had bitterly opposed everything that representative Nat Agor of the Brooklyn Wanderers proposed voted the nomination down, and when West Penn had to refuse the third vice presidency, it agreed to back Winton Barker as a member of the professional interests.

LOCAL MEN FIGHT HARD

The West Penn men put over plenty of action for Pittsburgh. The Clan Grant Club gets the $118, the national share of the gate receipts, the delegates putting this over.

It was also decided to omit the playing of the national amateur cup final this season, but to give to both the eastern and western finalists each a set of medals. The West Penn men also backed up the United States Referees' Union in their fight to make all games controlled by the members of that body in this country. It was West Penn's efforts on the floor that put it over. But the waging of the fight throughout was far more bitter than ever before.

Ex-Vice President George Healey, of Detroit, seemed to sound the battle cry when he stated that the association was displeased of the threats from the American Soccer League, and he cared little whether it withdrew or not from organized soccer. This fight was on the insistence of the council to force the American Soccer League to register its players with the governing body. The delegates to the convention felt Wisconsin's hospitality throughout. Last night the Wisconsin State Association tendered the delegates a banquet. Three hundred of Wisconsin's sons and daughters were gathered around the tables to do honor to the visitors from many states. The 1929 convention was awarded Cleveland. Cleveland, Detroit and New Bedford had put in bids for next year's affair, but the Ohio city won out.

TAX ALL GAMES

In the financing of the association all games in the country will be taxed 2 per cent and this money must be turned over to the national body each month. It might interest the German Sport Club, of Pittsburgh, to know that the fight to form a German-American Association directly with the national body lost its fight, much opposition being tendered by state associations.

Today the officials will go to the United States Referees' banquet and annual meeting at the Hotel Brevoort, Chicago. The referees put up quite a fight to increase the fees in cup games, but did not get any place. A meeting of the national commission will be held in Chicago today to name the secretary of the national body for the year. However, the writer feels that Tommy Cahill will not get the job. In the president's report it was stated that a field secretary is going to be appointed, and Cahill probably will get that. It is possible that Assistant Secretary Samson might get a chance to fill the heaviest job in the association.

Archers again defeated golfers in a mixed match over the Ellwood City Golf Club links yesterday when James Jiles, former national archery champion, scored a 72 and Richard Bennett a 74 against par 74, while Fred Loeffler and Ben Loeffler, playing with golf clubs, registered 75 and 79, respectively. Eight hundred tickets were sold for the mixed match, the proceeds of which went to charity.

agents who even tried to "listen in" when he went into a telephone booth. It was also charged that some one had placed liquor in his room in order to "get something on him."

WHEN Roush left the club Acting Manager Bresnahan announced to the press that he had been suspended indefinitely. One of the reasons given was that he had broken the club rules and had remained away from the club's hotel on the road until after 11:30 P. M. First it was said the suspension was indefinite, and later it was announced as being for only five days.

THOUGH announced officially to the news associations for their outside clients, the suspension, for some reason, was not published in the majority of the New York newspapers, though a day later it was mentioned casually in the comment columns of two of them.

Fred Fussell

Whether this was due to Roush's threats to "show somebody up" and the reported complaints of other New York players, is not known.

Roush would have been privileged, under the rules, to appeal to Commissioner Landis if his suspension had been for longer than ten days. But now it is said there was no suspension, and a physical examination report, dated June 30, is given out that is the same as one announced two weeks ago.

IT LOOKS as if the Giant officials were glad to hush the matter up with Roush. Some one must have stepped in and notified them that when a player's salary becomes burdensome the club that took the chance of giving him a long contract must live up to its bargain or get rid of the player by legitimate methods.

IF ANY further evidence had been needed as to just what is wrong with the Pittsburgh team, it would have been furnished by Saturday's game and the first game yesterday. The Pirates can win when they get real pitching such as that delivered by Grimes and Fussell, but, like any other club, they can't win when their hurling is off color, as it generally is when Kremer, Hill or Miljus is in the box, not to mention Meadows, who has never even started. That the Bucs have won consistently when Grimes was in there pitching real baseball, and has lost with equal consistency when one of the slumping regulars was on duty, shows that the trouble with the club is a pitching slump, and not internal dissention, or faulty strategy, or any of the other bunk that is dragged out at intervals, in the face of the fact the team is playing good ball as a whole and leading the league in batting by 13 points.

IT IS encouraging to see at least one other pitcher coming out to help Grimes. If Fred Fussell can keep up the form he showed yesterday, in shutting out the league leaders, form that has been in evidence in several of his recent games, Manager Bush will have at least two moundsmen who can be relied upon.

It took the hot weather of St. Louis to show what a real pitcher Fussell is when conditions are right. Even ordinary pitching would have sufficed to win the second game yesterday, but Miljus could not produce it and the Bucs were beaten in spite of the fact that they scored six runs.

THE continued failures of the so-called first-string men lead many fans to believe that it might not be a bad idea to give them a rest and take a chance with Brame, Tauscher and Dawson, in addition to Grimes and Fussell.

Bill Burwell

These might not do any better than the one-time aces that have been turned into deuces this season, but there is a chance that they would. They certainly could not do any worse.

BURLEIGH GRIMES kept up his great work Saturday and has now won 12 games and lost only six. Only Pipgras, with 14, and Benton 13, have won more games than the Pirate star. Burleigh, with 15 complete games out of 18 starts, is second to Benton in complete games pitched. Benton went the route Saturday for the sixteenth straight time.

2 to 0 in their favor. The second game brought victory to the banner of the Redbirds, but not before the Buccos had staged a brilliant battle. The Freebooters had the runs necessary to deadlock on the bases in the ninth when the contest ended. The score of this game was 8 to 6.

Wright, Grantham and Adams hooked three singles together in the second to give the Pirates their first tally. Sparky drove in the marker with two out, and he drove in Grantham with another run in the fifth. George doubled in this frame.

John Miljus and Sylvester Johnson were on the slab at the start of the twilight affair, but both had taken their departure before the seventh was completed. Miljus was unsteady from the start, and Burwell took his place in the third inning.

Ray Kremer went to the mound in the eighth, but the Frenchman was in the same disappointing stride that has long been his. He was in all sorts of trouble in the inning, but a fast double play held the run production to one tally.

Grantham, a big star of the hot series, singled with one out in the ninth. Adams fanned, but Hargreaves singled. Smith batted for Kremer and fanned.

Forbes

Stock Recover Vigorous, These Comparisons Show.

By B. C. FORBES

THE best of the stock market is its more orderly conduct. The public, rather than powerful speculators, are to be thanked for this. The rather violent swings in a dozen speculative favorites indicate clearly that large scale manipulation is still in progress. As understand it, few of the big bulls have changed their ideas as to what the market should do. They are still working for higher quotations.

THE writer feels less bearish under the new conditions than he did when things were being spectacularly whooped up in Wall Street, with prices exhibiting the agility of circus riders. Those who now buy stocks presumably do so in a calm frame of mind and not under the delirium of the excitement the wild boom generated. A stock market of 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 shares a day is a more rational affair than a 4,000,000-share market, with a 5,000,000-share day thrown in to cap the climax.

Not only so, but most stocks declined to more reasonable levels and were, therefore, less dangerous to buy. The more recent recovery has been quite substantial in many instances, although the general level at the end of the week was still well below the peak of the year.

VIEWED superficially, the advance in the market last week was the more inspiring because it was achieved in the face of 7½ and even (on Friday) 8 per cent call money. But, analyzed soberly, the movement would have carried more conviction had it been delayed until money rates had relapsed to more normal levels. The demonstration savored somewhat overmuch of bravado on the part of daring bulls.

Whether the next trend will be upward or downward, no human being can foretell. It was easy enough to predict with some confidence that the wild orgy would have a sudden end, but it is less easy to predict with any confidence whatsoever what direction the next turn will take. The writer is still inclined to think, however, that further spells of at least mild weakness will be experienced.

It is interesting to analyze just where representative stocks stand today in comparison with their highest quotations and their lowest quotations of the year. The following tables bring out the extent of the recovery.

It should be possible soon to get a more definite line on the market's likely course.

Meanwhile, no business developments of major importance are occurring.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, July 2.—(AP.)—Owing largely to much higher Liverpool quotations than expected and reports of further buying for Russia, wheat prices here took an early upward swing today. Unofficial monthly crop estimates proved to be about as had been looked for. Opening 3c to 2¾c higher, Chicago wheat later held near to the initial figures. Corn, oats and provisions were also firmer with corn starting unchanged to 1c up, but subsequently reacting somewhat.

Cable reports today that Russia had purchased so far 3,700,000 to 5,000,000 bushels of wheat and was still buying gave particular significance to a sharp rise in the Liverpool market. On the other hand, advices were at hand here showing material improvement in domestic harvest conditions, and private crop reports as of July 1 were but little different from general expectations.

The average of crop estimates issued here today by the leading Chicago experts were for 519,000,000 bushels yield of domestic winter wheat, 218,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, and 7,970,000,000 bushels of corn. These figures compared with a June 1 average of 513,000,000 bushels of winter wheat and 252,000,000 bushels of spring wheat.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 26 to 37 points, active months soon showing net losses of 30 to 37 points under realizing or liquidation promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and hope of improving weather in the South.

The decline brought in covering and commission house buying, which was encouraged by bullish crop reports, but rallies of 10 or 12 points met further liquidation. The market was unsettled at the end of the first hour, active months showing net declines of about 27 to 30 points.

Two private crop reports were issued, one making the condition 64.7 per cent and the increase in acreage 5 per cent, while the other made the increase in acreage 2.1 per cent, the condition 68.3 per cent and placed the indicated crop at 12,900,000.

The failure of bullish private crop reports to stimulate a more active demand appeared to increase reactionary sentiment and the selling became somewhat more general after the publication of favorable weather forecasts. Prices eased off to 22.35c for October, or about 37 to 39 points net lower. The volume of business decreased and the market at midday was fairly steady, with active months showing rallies of 8 or 10 points from the lowest.

NARROW FLUCTUATIONS ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

PENN-FEDERAL IN DEMAND

Pre-holiday dullness characterized the trading on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange at the opening of the new week today with prices showing no noticeable changes from last week's finals, and dealings being confined apparently to evening-up commitments while the traders awaited some definite sign as to coming events on the "big board."

The business during the first half of the session was for the most part in small lots of the various industrials which have been in the forefront of the market recently. Armstrong Cork failed to respond with any spirit to the news that the company has obtained a favorable decision in its patent litigation in connection with the manufacture of inlaid linoleum and changed hand during the forenoon at a small fractional decline from Saturday's close.

First National Bank at Pittsburgh was firm, selling at 365, unchanged from the last previous price, but with the $3 quarterly dividend having been deducted in the meantime.

A dip in Penn-Federal Corporation common to a price under 7 uncovered a latent demand for the shares and jerked it back quickly to 7½, where it rested following the early activity. This is the holding company of the Penn Theater, which is operated by the Loew interests. Firmness in Penn-Federal is attributed to the theater's ability to weather the storm of competition in the local movie field. Figures on operations are not available at this time, but it is understood the house is showing nice profits despite the weather and the competition. Some of the downtown movie houses have already closed for the season, a new departure in this field, while there are rumors that others may later go dark for the hot months.

Fuel stocks were practically unchanged. Lone Star was handled at 52, while the Arkansas Gas issues did not appear in the sales list until well along in the afternoon. There was no change in the prices of the brewing shares and business dropped off somewhat from the volume of the latter half of last week.

SHARES REACT AS MONEY IS ADVANCED

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP.)—Stock prices turned reactionary today on selling presumably inspired by the return of 8 per cent call money. Loans renewed at 7½ per cent, but the rate was advanced to 8 when banks called $20,000,000 to strengthen their reserve position and prepare for the heavy holiday demands for currency. Time money rates also advanced, being quoted as high as 6 per cent.

Some bear selling also came into the market on the theory that the rapidity of the recent advance had weakened the technical position of the market, and that there was a dearth of fresh buying power at the recent high levels. Floor traders also were inclined to take profits over the holiday.

Motors and high priced specialties bore the brunt of the selling pressure, although there were strong spots in each group. Case Threshing and Radio each crumbled about 10 points and General Motors, General Electric, International Harvester, Rossia Insurance, Texas and Pacific and Houston Oil were carried down 3¾ to 4¾ points by early afternoon. American International, Mack Trucks, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and U. S. Rubber first preferred also showed substantial recessions.

On the other hand, Brooklyn Edison jumped 9 points, Collins and Aikman 4½, and Dodge Brothers preferred and General Railway Signal 3½ and 3 points, respectively.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was unchanged at 4.36c for Cuban, duty paid, with no sales reported.

Raw sugar futures opened 1 to 3 points lower under July liquidation and selling of the later positions by houses with European connections, prompted by the easier London market. The offerings were not aggressive, however, and prices rallied later on covering and Cuban support and at midday were about unchanged from the close of a week ago. Trading was not active, and operators were inclined to limit fresh commitments and await developments in the spot market.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.90c for fine granulated. Withdrawals over the week-end were more active, probably influenced by the warmer weather, but new business continued light.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

AS A result of favorable court action and the deposit of very substantial majorities of stock, the consummation of the Dodge-Chrysler merger is practically assured. The Chrysler Corporation is not obliged to complete the transaction unless 90 per cent of the Dodge stock is deposited, but the totals are nearing this mark and additional stock is being received each day. Over 82 per cent of the preference stock, 74 per cent of the A stock and 98 per cent of the B stock has been deposited.

IN DENYING the application for an injunction against the merger, Supreme Court Justice Mullan in New York City stipulated that Dodge Brothers, Inc., file a bond to pay all non-assenting preference stockholders the amounts which may be awarded them by reason of the transfer of assets.

This, in the opinion of attorneys connected with the company and its bankers, does not mean that bonds covering the liquidating value of the preferred must be posted, but only bonds covering the cash value of the stock at the time of the merger.

UNDER the Dodge charter the preference stock is entitled to receive $105 a share in event of liquidation.

The application for the injunction against the merger was based on the claim that Dodge holders were entitled to this amount from the present transaction.

The opinion of the company attorneys, however, which appears to have been upheld in the court decision, is that the Maryland statutes, under which Dodge is incorporated, authorize the transfer of assets on any terms which are approved by two-thirds of the stockholders. More than this proportion of the stock has been deposited, which is the equivalent of giving consent. The attorneys believe that the Dodge-Chrysler combine is not a liquidation.

THERE has been much doubt about the status of the owners of the stock who do not deposit their holdings of Dodge for exchange into Chrysler stock under the terms of the plan. The general opinion is that Dodge stockholders, who merely hold their stock and take no action at all, will automatically be allotted their share of Chrysler stock once there will remain no assets Dodge Brothers, Inc., to either deem the stock or to pay divinds.

HE Dodge stockholders who formally protest at a stockholders' meeting, by dissent in writing, by forming a stockholders' protective committee, are entitled to receive cash payment for their stock. ts, in the opinio.. of company heys, will not be $105 a share, A will be an amount to be set by the Maryland courts. They think that the market value of the stock ruling during a brief time before there was public knowledge of the plan would be regarded as a fair value by the courts.

IT IS unlikely that Dodge stockholders will have an opportunity to wait for the setting of this price before deciding whether to deposit or demand cash. The time for deposit of the stock will be closed before any ruling can be made so that dissenting holders will have to take their chances on the action of the courts.

The existing laws of Maryland and some other states on mergers of corporations are making it impossible for small minorities to profit by refusing to accede to merger agreements however profitable they may be to the corporation as a whole.

Under some state laws at one time a few stockholders could delay consolidations for an indefinite period. Frequently these dissenters in the past were able to profit handsomely by demanding premiums for their stock.

THIS year Dodge is feeling the benefits of the new models which it has placed on the market. Sales of passenger cars from January 1 to June 23 were over 20 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1927. Retail sales were 57 per cent greater in the week ended June 23 than in the same week of 1927.

Output in the second half of this year will be greater than in the first half, due to the fact that full production of all lines will be enjoyed while only a few lines were in full operation early in the year.

Truck division orders are the largest in the history of the company. A new sport roadster has been added to the Victory Six line.

Stock Market Lament

"Tell me not in mournful numbers,"
Said the broker to the tape,
As it wiggled from the ticker,
There he stood with mouth agape.
"Holy socks, just look at Tin Plate,
Up twelve points and going more;
While Consolidated Sulphur's
Lower than the ocean's floor.
"I'm as good as dead," he murmured.
Said a friend, "Buck up, old sport,
You are just one out of many
Who has sold the market short."
"Short, my eye," he answered quickly.
"That's not what's troubling me;
I bought Sulphur, while the wife said
'Plunge on Tin Plate heavily'."

Try Fencing, Young Ladies

Strengthening, Beautifying, It Develops Every Muscle.

GERMANY'S CHAMPION FENCING GIRL.

The picture above shows well developed, graceful Fraulein Helene Mayer, Germany's champion female fencer. She sets a good example to some American girls, always wondering how they can get thin and keep thin.

Fencing, in youth, while the heart is strong, is the best of all exercises.

Fencing develops speed in eye and muscles. It develops the muscles without EXCESSIVE development. Notice the SLENDER arms and legs of this charming German girl, and her perfect UNIFORM development. Her muscles are like silk cords, her movements with the foil are swift and sure. She represents PERFECT development without any EXCESSIVE development.

There ought to be more schools for fencing, and more girls ought to take up fencing. It keeps the figure in good condition without the starvation methods that impoverish the blood, cheating the next generation when the girl becomes a mother.

If there were one fencing academy for every hundred lipstick stores, it would be a good thing for the women of this period.

You will notice that Fraulein Helene does NOT bob her hair, THAT'S PLEASANT FOR A CHANGE.

ANOTHER GERMAN GIRL—AFTER THE WAR STYLE.

This tall, charming creature represents the new generation of German girls, the kind that grew up after the war.

As far as the eye can reach, there seems to be no signs here of during-the-war starvation.

This athletic German girl would please the artistic eye, and a good many other eyes, and set Heinrich Heine, if he were alive, to writing verses rapidly.

Artists would be interested in the length of the body, as compared with the length of the head from chin to forehead. That comparison is important. Venus de Milo is the perfect sample of right proportions.

You will notice also the perfectly straight, well developed legs, and the sensible hips that have not been starved. They retain sufficient vitality to enable this girl to be a good German MOTHER later, not a washed out wisp, like some foolish American girls.

The shoes, we are bound to say, do not go with the costume. Probably on this occasion the fine German girl was just dressed up to be photographed. So excuse the shoes, which are not what you might call athletic.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Stellar Democracy

The class in English of the Englewood (N. J.) High School asks me to answer the following question:

"We know that all the planets and asteroids revolve around the sun, but we would like to know what the sun revolves around. As far as we know the sun is traveling around the Star Vega in the constellation Lyra. Will you kindly give us further information on this subject?

AS FAR as astronomers can tell from any observations hitherto made, the sun is not traveling around any fixed center. The path that the sun pursues through space appears to be straight. This appearance might arise from the enormous size of its orbit (if it had an orbit), just as the surface of a pond appears perfectly level, although it must, in fact, be curved as a part of the earth's globular surface. If the sun's motion were in a definite orbit many trillions of miles in diameter a long series of co-ordinate observations would be needed to detect the curvature; and such detection would be hampered by the great uncertainties of observation. These uncertainties are now so troublesome that no two determinations of the direction of the sun's motion are exactly in accordance, and one might be tempted to suspect from their inconsistencies that the direction was capriciously variable.

Whatever is true of the sun in this respect must be true of the other stars, for they are all in motion—but at different speeds and in different directions. They certainly are not, as far as observation shows, all traveling around a common fixed center, as the planets travel around the sun. Yet there are indications that the galactic universe to which we belong (meaning that vast assemblage of stars of which the Milky Way forms the ground plan, or skeleton) may have a general revolution just as a great cloud of whirling dust, in which the individual particles are swept into eddies and carried in different directions by conflicting currents, may revolve as a whole around its central part.

There are, indeed, indications of the location of the center (in this sense) of the galactic system. It appears to lie in that direction in which the Milky Way looks most luminous on summer nights, just above the southern horizon. There are seen the bright constellations Scorpio, Ophiuchus and Sagittarius, rendered more lustrous by the shimmering radiance of the far-distant region of space which serves as a background for their lucent stars.

All the stars and other celestial objects that we see, except perhaps the mysterious spiral nebulate, which may be outlying universes, combine to make up this system, whose constituents are all in incessant motion, like, one may say, the molecules in a mass of gas, but which are dynamically controlled by no central body, after the manner of the planetary system, but by the resultant of their multitudinous attractions upon one another.

In the earlier history of astronomy the supposition was entertained for a time that a real central body, or "central sun," might exist around which our sun, together with all other stars, revolved in orbits of stupendous size, and at one time the star Alcyone, the brightest of the group called the Pleiades, was imagined actually to be that controlling center. But it was soon seen that this was a mistake; Alcyone, with its sister Pleiades, is in motion like all the others. The stars constitute, apparently, a vast democracy in which there are great and small, superior and inferior, but no king over all.

Domestic Help

MORE trouble looms for the housewife who tries to keep her cook or chauffeur, if the scheme devised by an Pacific Coast man is successful. He has applied for articles of incorporation for a training school for servants.

Just imagine the possibilities when "Dr." Jane refuses to brown the steak any longer or "Prof." John decides not to drive the family auto more than a certain number of miles a day without overtime payment.

Most householders would consider a well trained and reliable servant a priceless jewel, but they may have some doubt about the one who comes into service armed with a "diploma" from some "servants' training school." It will be interesting to watch the development of the Californian's dream. The incorporator is a mail carrier.

Give Children a Chance

IF you have frequent quarrels in your home your children will be quarrelsome and petty.

They may not show signs of illtemper while you are around because they dare not, but they will display plenty of it among their companions.

In the home where there is much browbeating the children will show such proclivities.

Why not, since it is the thing to which they are accustomed?

They think it a part of daily life.

You wonder why your children quarrel so much with the neighbors' children, but the reason is not hard to determine.

Think of your own home life.

And when two children with the same home environment meet there are bound to be disagreements, if they are from "contradicting" families.

Don't blame the youngsters.

Change the attitude at home toward unkind and unpleasant words, unaccommodating moods and disrespectful acts.

Blame yourself.

Then you will be on the way toward making your children more companionable.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Midsummer

THE season is too sweet, too fair to stay,
Too brimmed with flowers and fruits,
Too bright with daisies' gold, the breeze too gay
With mocking-birds' disputes.

Yet, for a little while a pause has come
As though old Time stood still
To note a falling pear, to hear bees'
hum
And locusts' challenge shrill.

Sometimes, as to the earth in this bright hour,
There comes to men a lull,
While swiftly all life's rare perfections flower
And springs of joy are full.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

NOBODY has so much fun and so much trouble as a school teacher, I reckon. The teachers get to associate with kids all the time, and that must be a lot of fun. But they have to stand for a good deal of spoofing from the kids, too. And a kid can think of a good many ways to make a teacher miserable.

The school that this here Johnny went to was visited by a city superintendent from another town, and this visitor wanted to show off a little and make himself solid with the kids. So he was asking the scholars easy questions and then giving them all-day suckers for answering right.

So the visitor says to Johnny, "How much is four and four?"

"Eight," says Johnny.

"That's right," says the old bluffer, "and here is eight pieces of candy for you for getting it right. Eight is the answer, and eight pieces of candy it is."

Johnny looked at his candy and counted the pieces, and then he held up his hand and says, "Say, I made a mistake. The answer is sixteen!"

No Luck

HE WAS up for his university entrance examination. His intellectual attainments were known to be slight, but the powers that be were anxious to pass him, for he was a magnificent oarsman. As a matter of fact, he excelled in every kind of sport.

"Just put down something," pleaded his tutor. "Write down anything you can, and we'll get you through somehow or other." And he left his pupil to it.

He sat for two hours gazing at the virgin paper before him. Then he put down the one word: "Dam."

Later on his tutor came up to him more in sorrow than in anger.

"We can't pass you," he said despairingly. "You've spelt it wrong!"

Hedging

A SCOTSMAN and an Englishman were shooting together, and as the Englishman was a very poor shot, the Scot decided to get a little spare cash at his expense.

"I'll bet ye a couple o' pounds," he said, "that ye canna shoot at anything over 200 yards and kill it."

"Right," answered the other. "I'll take you."

Just then a big black crow passed overhead, and, taking careful aim, the Englishman fired. The bird fell dead at his feet.

"I've won!" he cried joyfully.

The Scot was crestfallen.

"But, mon," he began, "you dinna win the bet. A fall o' that distance wud kill ony bur-rd."

Clever Pupil

TEACHER: "What is a wonder?"

Pupil: "I don't know."

Teacher: "Well, suppose I climb a high tower and lose my balance and fall into the street—if I am not hurt, what is that?"

Pupil: "Luck."

Teacher: "More than luck. Suppose I do the same again?"

Pupil: "That is accident."

Teacher: "More than that, suppose I do it a third time—what is that?"

Pupil: "Habit."

Isn't It So?

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 2.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Breakfasted with a man who recently dined with Mr. Coolidge and told of his taciturn manner, which I believe his chiefest charm. Nor did the President speak a word during the evening save when directly addressed.

So coming upon Francis X. Bushman, chatted awhile, and his hair has grown white, albeit his figure is youthful. This day I hear celebrities who pose for cigaret ads are now donating the monetary rewards to a fund for unfortunate writers and artists.

In the evening to dinner with Councilman Meredith Nicholson, and we dropped into a vaudeville show, but found it dull, and walked among the bright lights of Broadway. Then home and read interesting proof that Poe's best creative efforts were during temperate years.

Circulating libraries now make books easily available for busy workers. Agents present their lists to office building employees for selections, these are delivered and called for. As a result it is estimated some 100,000 books are read weekly that would not be otherwise.

Some interesting reading statistics have been gathered by these agents. Book-keepers and accountants almost invariably show a preference for detective stories. Office managers lean toward the biographical. Stenographers like romance and poetry, and the most consistent readers of all office workers are office boys. Most of us have noticed that when we made our calls.

More books are borrowed from circulating libraries in the financial district of skyscrapers than any other. Stories of finance are rarely selected.

A grammatical purist has found 18 out of a selected 20 men of prominence invited to speak over the radio at different time in New York used "don't" when "doesn't" should have been used. Only two in any way approached the critical grammarian's idea of good English and they were far from perfect.

And two first night theatrical performances revealed such glaring grammatical absurdities they received critical hoots. Yet they settled down to long runs. As cheerleader in the non-grammatical movement, that's dandy.

There have been in all 87 "Broadway Butterfly" murders. These concern the beautiful small town girl who comes to the city to acquire fame and fortune but chooses the primrose path—and the old story. Champagne, jewels, a brown-stone front and the usual mysterious death.

The first "Broadway Butterfly" murder victim was Helen Jewett. Her body was found in a house in Thomas street in 1836. According to the press of the day Thomas street was then a thoroughfare of magnificent homes with gardens and "filled with rare champagne and pretty filles de joie."

She was compared to Phryne and Aspasia and the town was in an excited lather for weeks. In the chronology of such crimes there is evidence the victim always led several men to believe each was everything in her life.

Born gold-diggers, they make the men pay, pay and pay. And some time or other one discovers he has been plucked and in the heat of fury kills. The "butterfly" murder is the most difficult of all to solve because the men who would be suspected are usually philanderers of prominence who have carefully secreted their identity from those they meet in such intrigues.

Impulses

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Miss Jackson, after 11 years' experience at San Quentin State Prison, declares that women criminals are the victims of uncontrolled impulse rather than of a physiological leaning toward crime.

"There is no criminal type among women prisoners," she says. "Crime among women generally follows an uncontrolled impulse in which women leave the usual path of life and make a detour into crime without thought of the results that follow."

It appears from this that self-control in all emergencies is the virtue most needed.

The writer was once a prison official and frequently visited the state prisons of Illinois. He was surprised to find that the class of convicts that gave the least trouble was the murderers. The reason is that murders are usually committed on a sudden impulse and a man need not be a hardened criminal to be guilty of this crime.

Of course, there are some people who are simply lacking in moral sense. Their whole tone of morals is low and all they need to commit a crime is the opportunity.

But all of us are potential criminals when it comes to impulse, a sudden surging of passion or some overwhelming desire.

Parents should learn from this that the most necessary lesson to teach children is self control. Children do not need so much to be taught obedience as to be taught how to obey their own better selves.

Any one who finds his passions too strong for him and who loses his sense of restraint when under the influence of them is in danger of committing any crime.

Self descipline may be very hard: to people of strong emotions it is sure to be hard.

But it is none the less essential. Most lawsuits would be avoided if people would control themselves and could learn to be good sports and take their losses without yielding to a desire for vengeance.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

SHE is an awfully nice girl, holding a position in the offices of Miss Elizabeth Marbury, playwright and woman political leader.

One night last week, in the deepest, darkest hour of the night, she awakened, feeling something brush her face. She called her husband.

"Dear, quick? There is something in the room. I felt it."

They listened for a moment. Only silence.

A little later she called again.

"Dear—turn on the lights. I tell you there is something in here."

A huge rat in the corner was showing vicious possibilities in a row of very white, very sharp pointed teeth.

They knew better than to fight the rat. They edged it into the dining room, and shut the door.

After a few moments, the husband agreed to call the police.

A good old Irish voice answered the phone. "It ain't the business of the police department to be a-chasing rats," he told them.

The lady explained he better come. Her husband was on a big New York newspaper (the one that loves animal stories) and what if something terrible happened?

The lieutenant changed his mind. He sent an officer.

The husband, an awfully good fellow, gave the police officer a little nip of something to take the edge off his grouch. That was fair enough. He even joined him.

His own disposition wasn't any too good. He felt he should have known what to do about the rat, and he just didn't, that was all.

After a nice, friendly chat the officer had another, and decided that he better not shoot the rat. It would arouse the neighbors and cause too much excitement. He didn't like to have everybody know he was chasing rats, and the husband didn't want the neighbors to know he called in the police.

The officer knew what he would do—he would get a cat. He knew a man with a regular rat-eating cat, only a block away.

But that cat was out. You know, 2 a. m. and a cat!

Another little friendly chat. They thought of another cat and went after it. Believe it or not, that cat was out, too!

It finally was decided to club the rat to death. The two men entered cautiously and proceeded to get their rat. All that was left to do, then, was to dispose of the corpus delicti.

As the officer left the house the husband accompanied him to the street. A car was parked at the curb. It had been there all night. "Maybe he just as soon have this as a ticket." The officer tossed the dead rat into the front seat, and whistled cheerily on his way back to the station.

If you have any rat killing to be done, you know where to find help.
